The Village

In commercial district

Councilmen hastily enact ban on apartment conversions

AN URGENCY ordinance that bans any apartment conversions in the commercial district was adopted Monday by the Carmel City Council.

The ordinance was passed in reaction to news of the proposed sale and conversion of a four-unit apartment house on Dolores and Third. The buyer wanted to make it a motel. The ordinance quashed those plans even though the city Business License Review Board approved the conversion Sept. 14.

The 5-0 council vote came at 11:55 p.m. The council chambers were almost empty. The ordinance took effect immediately. It will remain in effect for four months at which time the council would have to pass permanent legislation to replace it. In approving the ordinance, the council asked the Carmel Planning Commission to study the apartment conversion issue.

The ordinance says no apartments in the business district can be converted to commercial or storage use. Existing apartments can only be used as dwelling units under the ordinance.

Worried conversions will increase downtown

THE URGENCY legislation was sought by Mayor Gunnar Norberg after the council had completed its agenda items. The action caught City Attorney George Brehmer by surprise. As the council discussed the moratorium, Brehmer was drafting the legislation.

The action will prevent Dr. Richard Bass, a physician from San Jose, from converting the Hillside Apartments into a motel. Roger Winslow, the owner, and Bass have a sales agreement that is in escrow.

The legislation was criticized by Councilman Howard Brunn, who finally relented and voted with the council majority.

"Why should we sit here at 11:45 and try to decide on something this important?" Brunn said. "Isn't this something the planning commission should study? What will happen in the next few weeks that warrants this as an emergency? What do we have a planning commission for?"

Brunn finally agreed to vote for the ordinance when the council agreed to send it to the planning commission for study.

"This ordinance applies to all apartments presently being used for apartment purposes, whether or not any authorization or permits were received by the city for conversion of apartments to other uses," the ordinance states. That is the clause that specifically forbids the conversion of the Hillside Apartments.

The business license board required Bass to remove the kitchens from the units as a condition to the conversion.

The kitchens have not been removed and no eviction notices have been given to the five tenants, according to Arthur Strasburger, the real estate agent handling the sale.

BECAUSE NO "substantive" changes had been made to the apartments, Brehmer said the city could set conditions to prohibit the conversion from apartments to motel units.

The urgency legislation also pleased Councilman Mike Brown, who has pressed for such a law. Brown objects to changing second story apartments in the business district to commercial uses.

That notion irked Brunn. "There is an awful lot of space not suitable for any other use. You're going to force some person to stay in a substandard apartment just because you don't want it for commercial use. I can see we're acting hastily," Brunn warned.

But the council acted. Norberg looked at the clock, said it was the "bewitching hour of midnight," and called for a vote.

Get-tough laws to be applied to two-story houses

The Carmel City Council passed legislation Monday to restrict construction of so-called "large houses" in Carmel.

By a 4-1 vote, the council approved the first reading of an ordinance that will reduce the allowed building height by six feet and tighten site coverage limits in the R-1 residential zone.

Any house higher than 24 feet now will need a variance. Before, the builder could obtain a use permit for houses from 24 to 30 feet high. Use permits are easier to obtain than variances, which only had been required for buildings exceeding 30 feet.

Lot coverage for single-story houses was reduced from 40 per cent to 30 per cent. Two-story houses may cover no more than 30 per cent under the new ordinance. Previously, they could cover 35 per cent. The lot coverage limits apply to 8,000-square-foot lots.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg dissented. He said the ordinance should be more restrictive on larger lots. The second reading and final adoption of the ordinance is expected Monday.

The Carmel Planning Commission and the council have studied the "large house" issue since March. The ordinance slightly reduces the allowed sizes of second stories on some new houses. But two councilmen were uncertain if the restrictions were tough enough.

"I'm afraid we'll still end up with a bunch of two-story houses. We won't be able to see the trees through the houses," said Councilman Howard Brunn. Brunn suggested legislation to encourage one-story homes.

"Let's just outlaw second floors," said Robert Stephenson, the planning commission chairman.

"You can't," replied Brunn.

"Why not?" asked Stephenson.

Brunn shook his head. "That's unreasonable," he said.

"I don't think we're encouraging people to build two-story houses. It's better to stack it up in the air than to spread it out on the ground," Stephenson said.

"This ordinance was not drafted to put a hardship on people who want to build. It is a rational regulation for people building houses," said Councilman Leslie Gross.

Ninth at San Carlos

New stop signs provoke complaints from drivers

COMPLAINTS ABOUT a pair of new stop signs across from Sunset Center, on San Carlos Street, are multiplying and neighbors are said to be passing a petition to get rid of it. One unidentified motorist became so angry he hitched a rope around it and pulled it down one night last week, according to the police. The battered sign has been replaced.

ONE ANGRY motorist lassoed the sign and dragged it away with his car. Ed Brewer, a foreman in the Carmel Public Works Department, holds the battered sign.

The signs are at the T-intersection where Ninth connects with San Carlos. They were installed in mid-September over the objections of the police, the Carmel Planning Commission and its traffic and circulation subcommittee.

"It's a real hazard," said one person who lives near the intersection. The complaints are that the signs are obscured by bushes and large vehicles and that they compound traffic jams before and after events at the nearby Sunset Center and the clubhouse of the Carmel Woman's Club. San Carlos is a through street that runs north and south.

The Carmel City Council approved the signs on a 3-2 vote Sept. 5. The majority was composed of Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilmen Howard Brunn and Leslie Gross. Councilmen Mike Brown and Helen Arnold voted against the signs.

RUTHIE OTRICH, a candle store owner from Carmel, has filed a complaint at City Hall about the signs. Mrs. Otrich claimed she nearly was rear-ended last week when she stopped for one of the signs. "That sign is in an impossible place. After I filed the complaint, a meter maid who happened to be standing nearby said she was glad I'd done it," Mrs. Otrich said.

TREE LIMBS and parked cars partly obscure the sign at Ninth and San Carlos. This is the view of a northbound motorist from about four car lengths away. (Michael Stang photos)

Now the traffic and circulation subcommittee is asking the planning commission to get the City Council to reconsider its unpopular decision. The commission is scheduled to discuss the issue Wednesday, Oct. 18.

Robert W. Priestley, a member of the public who serves on the traffic subcommittee, expressed anger about the council decision when the subcommittee met Sept. 26.

"I think we ought to give out the telephone numbers of the people who approved this sign," he said.

When it decided to install the stop signs, the council majority reasoned that traffic would be slowed on San Carlos, thus discouraging motorists from using it as a shortcut around congestion on Highway 1.

As Brunn put it, "This may not be a scientific approach, but we have to slow down the traffic flow."

BUT THE STOP signs don't seem to be working out. In Mrs. Otrich's case, she didn't see the sign until the last minute because a recreational vehicle was parked in front of the sign. When she spotted the sign at the last minute, she slammed on her brakes and the car following her skidded and barely missed her back bumper.

"You just get started from the last stop sign and you have to stop again. With the energy crisis and all, it's silly," said Marian Brueck, a Carmel resident for 31 years and one of those who lives near the intersection.

"Most cars just go through it," she said.

Before the council voted on the signs, Carmel Police Sgt. Gerald E. Pullen told its members that he saw no reason to install them at that particular intersection. There had been only two minor mishaps at the corner in the past five years, Pullen said.

The stop sign seen by southbound motorists is partly obscured by a small tree and some bushes, said Pullen. They have not been removed.

Speaking of those on the council who outvoted her, Mrs. Arnold said, "I think they made a mistake. Every time a car has to stop, the shifting of gears creates more and more air and noise pollution."

Bless those pets!

Even the animals need a blessing now and then.

Scores of worshippers brought their pets to All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel for the annual animal blessing Sunday.

The Rev. Raymond L. Hess offered the blessing (upper photo) as the pet owners came to him in line. One of two pet rabbits in the David Hardy household was more interested in photographer Michael Stang's advance than the outdoor service at the church (left photo). That is David holding the pet.

For "Nicholas," the pet tabby of little Heather Piccotto (right photo), Sunday was special. Not only did he get a blessing, Nicholas also celebrated his first birthday.

High school enrollment

Agriculture scores big with Carmel teenagers

By KEN PETERSON

CENSUS FIGURES show families are leaving the farms, but enrollment figures from Carmel High School show a surge of interest in agriculture courses.

A total of 29 students have signed up for the vocational agriculture class that attracted only 15 last year. Also, a new agribusiness course has been added and Carmel has hired a full-time instructor to handle the two programs and a third that draws students from throughout the Peninsula.

The district had been trying for months to hire a part-time instructor for the vocational agriculture program and the "Parks and Rural Recreation" section of the Regional Occupation Program (ROP).

According to Chuck Phillips, vocational education coordinator for the Carmel district, there is a shortage of qualified agriculture teachers who want to work full time.

With the passage of Proposition 13, about 25 agriculture teachers left the state for jobs elsewhere, shrinking the number of available instructors even more, he said.

THE BOARD of trustees planned last spring to make the Carmel job a full-time position by adding an ROP agribusiness course to the other two classes. They dropped that idea because of Proposition 13, but changed their minds last week because they couldn't find a part-time instructor.

They hired Elizabeth Meyenberg of Salinas as a full-time teacher for the classes. She began work last week.

While Phillips said there is a trend toward mechanization which limits the farm job market, he said students in the Carmel programs can find work.

"We're not overtraining for the market," he said.

The vocational agriculture class has 29 students this fall, nearly double the 15 last fall and up from 20 last spring. Another 30 are signed up for the "Parks and Rural Recreation" class, equal to the enrollment last spring. Eleven of the students are from the Carmel district, up from six last year.

Phillips has no enrollment figures yet for the agribusiness course because it only began when Mrs. Meyenberg started teaching. He expects enrollment in that class to rise over a two-year period as the course is established in the curriculum.

Vocational agriculture is a regular high school class with no work-experience program. It is bound up so closely with the Future Farmers of America they are "almost synonymous," Phillips said, and it is "not aimed at entry-level job skills."

Students in the class raise animals or crops as projects, he said. Many live in Carmel Valley and own horses or other animals already. The district has a small farm on Schulte Road in the Valley.

PARKS AND RURAL Recreation offers some classroom instruction, with most of the education coming in on-the-job training. Students in the class work with state, local and regional parks or in private recreation facilities in the Carmel and Carmel Valley area. They include golf courses and stables.

ROP students are drawn from the Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey school districts, which cooperate in the program. Some classes are offered only in the Carmel district, while others are available only in the other two.

Interest in the new agribusiness course came from two sources, according to Phillips. Farmers and ranchers on the Agriculture Advisory Committee to the district suggested it as "perhaps the most helpful way to teach kids about agriculture careers."

THE OTHER THRUST for the class came from the youngsters themselves.

"Some of them are really interested in ag, but they told me they were still working as grocery clerks or in a drug store," Phillips said. "Basically, they didn't know how to go about getting jobs in ag."

Agribusiness will run in a fashion similar to the parks and recreation class, but students will have farm-related jobs. They will work on cattle and horse ranches in Carmel Valley and on farms such as those owned by Odello and Wolter. Other jobs will be at tree farms, nurseries, Hacienda Hay and Feed or the Carmel Valley Poultry Ranch.

"The number of Carmel Valley ranches is not apparent, but they're there," Phillips

NEW COUNTY planning commissioner S. Gary Varga, 32, is an attorney in Carmel. He was appointed Tuesday by Supervisor Sam Farr.

Attorney Varga named to planning commission

S. Gary Varga, a Carmel attorney and director of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, was named to the Monterey County Planning Commission on Tuesday by Supervisor Sam Farr.

Varga, 32, replaces Pacific Grove geologist Paul Patchick on the nine-member commission. Patchick resigned earlier this year to work on a job in the Southwest.

Varga has lived on the Monterey Peninsula for six years. He was an attorney for the U.S. Army and was stationed at Fort Ord.

He said he hopes to streamline planning commission procedures while he is on the board. Varga said the county needs to eliminate the "delays and high expense" facing both environmentalists and developers.

Varga said he believes the commission should have a "one-stop shopping" approach where projects can either be approved or rejected quickly.

An Ohio native, Varga has been in private practice in Carmel since 1976.

He prepared many of the background reports on growth management methods for the Carmel Valley Master Plan Advisory Committee, in addition to his activities in the CVPOA.

Varga received a bachelor's degree in business administration from Ohio State University in 1968 and won the state of Ohio debate tournament while at the university.

He received his law degree in 1971 from Duke University in North Carolina and later attended the Judge Advocate General's School at the University of Virginia while in the Army.

Varga was a paratrooper in the Army in addition to his legal service. Prior to that, he was a law clerk for Judge Donald Russell of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

He lives with his son, Von, 13, on Atherton Drive in the Hatton Fields area east of Carmel.

Witch-hunt

Dear Editor:

Your familiarity with witch-hunting (Pine Knots, Sept. 28) is undoubtedly due to your continual attacks on Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilwoman Helen Arnold in particular and the Carmel City Council as a whole.

The last local election apparently did not indicate to you that the residents believe in and want exactly what our preamble states.

How fortunate we are to have on our council and planning commission persons who are aware of the desires of the residents. Example: controlling illegally built houses, protective zoning, etc. Contrary to rumor and accusation, I am sure you are aware that Mrs. Arnold's new house conforms completely to the new ordinance. It could be built, exactly as is, today.

It is somewhat difficult for a local resident to explain to a native of New York and a non-resident that they really have no business, let alone position to take, regarding the running of Carmel. At least, not unless they're asked.

As an outsider, how ungrateful you are to condemn and criticize the community that gave you the opportunity and is affording you your livelihood.

As a resident of Carmel (probably longer than you've been born), I feel you should use your excessive energies in your own community, not mine. I am quite weary of your personal virulence against the people who are working very hard to bring back some semblance of the community we all originally came here to enjoy. I thank them.

Charge is untrue

Dear Editor:

As a retired officer, I was naturally concerned when I first heard Eric Seastrand's oft-repeated charge that Congressman Leon Panetta has supported "veterans benefits for deserters." Upon researching this charge, however, I have found that it is flatly untrue.

In 1977, President Carter announced a program giving veterans of the Vietnam era an opportunity to have a less-than-honorable discharge reviewed for possible upgrading. A similar opportunity was offered to veterans of World War II and Korea. At that time, a congressman from Tennessee, Robin Beard, tried to get an amendment passed that would have withheld veterans benefits from anyone whose discharge was upgraded under the president's program, regardless of the circumstances.

This measure would have denied VA protection to thousands of men who fought with distinction in Vietnam, and Congressman Panetta responsibly opposed it. However, he did support a successful bill (H.R. 8698/S. 1307) which guarantees that no one with an upgraded discharge will receive VA benefits unless he also meets the qualification standards that applied to veterans of previous wars.

Under the Panetta-supported legislation, in other words, no combat deserter could possibly qualify for veterans benefits.

Congressman Panetta is himself an Army veteran of the Vietnam era and a recipient of the Army Commendation Medal. I don't know where Eric Seastrand served, except in the John Birch Society. I do know that a man with his disregard for the truth has no business representing us in Congress.

Anti big money

Dear Editor:

I was thrilled to read in last week's Pine Cone about your interview with a Carmel man, Sterling J. Cottrell, who is all set to go "all out" against the 20th Century-Fox takeover of the Pebble Beach Corp., nee Del Monte Properties Co.

I am thrilled because one individual will stick his neck out to the extent of being willing to fight the financial powers that be. I had been as much concerned as he, possibly, about this takeover ever since its announcement, but had merely sighed, believing any fight against "money" was hopeless, as, in my experience on the local political scene, it has proved to be.

It appears that Mr. Cottrell is not only knowledgeable in the ways of high finance, but also in the methods of diplomacy. At least, that is his life's experience. Let us hope he will succeed in his so far lone quest to halt the juggernaut of foreign money (Hollywood or Wall Street are equally foreign to the Monterey Peninsula) taking over the policies and planning for the Del Monte Forest area before we all become just another set of pawns in the big money deals of this money-oriented country (and county).

Thank you, Pine Cone, for your constant job of disclosing both the potential "grabs" of our wonderful-and-limited landscape, and pointing up the frailties of our current conscientious and courageous councilmen, but please not such constant carping and heavy sarcasm.

Gone too far

Dear Editor:

You have gone too far. Calling Carmel's mayor ill-tempered is preposterous. He is the most patient, self-controlled, soft-spoken city official I have ever known.

Yes, he has been persistent and persevering year after year in his belief that Carmel is a special place. His efforts to preserve some semblance of the quality of life that attracts so many people to our "village" have continued unabated in spite of cruel and unrelenting criticism. It has generally been undeserved, but no more so than your recent hostility.

I have been trying to understand your position because you are a cherished friend, but finally I have to speak out.

P.S. Since I have felt a part of Carmel for over 30 years, I support annexation so I can take voting responsibility for its council members.

Years in vain?

Dear Editor:

Although I am no longer a resident of Carmel, I cannot overlook the improprieties evidenced in the thinking in your article of Sept. 21, "Prominent lawyer to fight hot tub ban."

A review of the controversial legislation of 10 or so years ago which made Carmel Cottages a legal use in the residential or R-1 district would show that the legislation was made under the condition that no additions or changes would be made in use. A lawyer like Mr. (Francis) Heisler, I am sure, can find loopholes in the wording, but there's no question that the intent was to maintain the status quo.

The hot tub idea would not have been permitted at the time of this legislation nor would a putting green. The question is raised: "How is it that there was a 'conference room' in these residential cottages? Was it there 10 years ago?"

It appears that this in itself was a violation of the legislation, not to mention the roundabout way of putting a hot tub in it.

The building inspector was certainly aware of these requirements. The "approval" of Bob Griggs, planning director, seems to be out of order.

My hope is that fairness and honesty will still prevail in Carmel and that I didn't spend four years on the Carmel City Council in vain.

And now, the problems

By AL EISNER

"DESPITE ITS RELATIVELY small size, Carmel is not an island, and it both affects and is affected by the cities and unincorporated communities surrounding it."

That's from the draft of the Local Coastal Work Program that was approved by the City Council on Monday night and passed on to the planning commission for more work. When all the elements in the program are identified and agreed upon by the city staff and by coastal commission staff, it will go before the people. Final approval rests with the state Coastal Commission.

Opinion

The draft is an interesting document that deserves more public attention. It's interesting because it identifies some problems that have either been brushed aside or ignored by our City Council in its pell-mell rush to "save Carmel."

Some of the problems that Carmel will have to face are the creation of low-moderate income housing; public access to Carmel's beaches; the persistent parking problem downtown; erosion of our beaches and protection by creation of seawalls; rest room facilities for visitors; solution to the need for a city corporation yard; and finding some answer to the need for alternative roadways to relieve the traffic circulation problem outside of the city.

It's ironic that most of the above problems have been identified by interested persons in the past, but ignored or swept aside as the council addressed itself to matters that rated higher priority. Now that the state has intervened, however, perhaps the city will begin to deal with these questions—and others—that affect the quality of life in Carmel.

WHAT, FOR EXAMPLE, is the city doing about the worsening parking problem? It's an open secret that nothing—absolutely nothing—is being done because of Mayor Gunnar Norberg's stubborn belief that the creation of more parking spaces would only create more traffic.

There's a certain logic to that argument, I guess. But, should the will of a handful of people temporarily in office at the whim of the voters preside over a pressing community need? Perhaps more creative solutions can be found . . . like the operation of a minibus system that would relieve the need for more parking spaces. If we hide our heads in the sand, though, the problem will only get worse—both for local residents and for visitors.

Construction of more low-moderate income housing? That's a laugh. The severely restrictive laws governing construction in the new R-4 district (formerly the C-2 district along Junipero) make it virtually impossible for property owners to build apartments in the "low-moderate" range.

Because the council and planning commission seemed determined to punish property owners rather than work with them to solve a pressing community need, the studio apartments that might some day be built in the R-4 zone will rent for $350 per month and up.

Somebody probably could create a lot of mischief by pointing out to the Coastal Commission that the city has subverted the intent of the Coastal Act by virtually ensuring that low-cost housing for the elderly or the needy could never be built under the controversial provisions of the new R-4 zone.

How about public rest rooms downtown and at the south end of Carmel beach? City councils have grappled with this problem for decades, and nothing seems to happen. Maybe the Coastal Commission will prod the city into action.

Transportation for older citizens? Virtually impossible in Carmel. The need has been partly met by private agencies like the Carmel Foundation and the Alliance on Aging. What is Carmel planning to do about it? Betcha they're not planning to do anything about it. The City Council is too busy "saving Carmel" to be concerned with human needs.

IT MIGHT BE argued that the rash of legislation adopted by the City Council in the past six months will ultimately have its effect on the quality of life in Carmel by protecting the village against the intrusions of greedy developers. My quarrel with this argument is based on my skepticism in the ability of government to solve our problems. Everywhere else in the nation, it has become increasingly clear that people don't trust government and they want less government.

Our City Council should address itself to the human needs of its citizens at the same time it keeps busy "saving Carmel."

I'll deal with this question again in future columns.

Attorney general's sinister role in planning

By ROBERT L. SPEER

THE FULL IMPACT of the state attorney general's questionnaire you discuss in your Sept. 28 issue is barely discernible in your story. In order to fully comprehend the implications of this very selectively distributed questionnaire concerning public access in Cannery Row and the Carmel-Big Sur areas, it is necessary to study the questionnaire itself, in conjunction with the 112-page so-called "manual" prepared by the state to assist the coastal commission in determining "public rights." These two documents, taken together, present an unprecedented state-sponsored graduate course in the art of confiscating private lands for public use via the illegal act of trespassing—and accomplishing that mission without compensation to owners.

To begin with, the questionnaire is being distributed not just locally, but the entire length of the California coast, to skin divers' clubs and skin divers' schools, and to other favored groups, with target areas changed to suit locations; and it applies not only to beachfront lands, but also to "uplands" or inland properties.

Secondly, it is more than a questionnaire; it also is an affidavit which ripens into a confession when it is signed, and those signing it admit, under oath, that they have been guilty of an offense under California laws (trespassing)—and not just once, but repeatedly.

THE OPENING paragraph of the questionnaire only hints at the document's ramifications. It reads: "The state of California is investigating uses made of beach and upland areas around Cannery Row and Carmel-Big Sur for the purposes of determining whether any public rights exist in the area by reason of past public uses."

It is only when you realize that the targeting of these two areas has absolutely no validity and when you begin to project the questionnaire, that the true intent and shocking potential of this document are revealed.

"Public access" and "public use," under the policies implicit in both the questionnaire and the manual, could include, in addition to seashore access, access to vacant city lots, farms, ranches, hills, forests, private roads, jeep trails, fire trails, fields, riverbeds, greenbelts, scenic easements—in short, wherever trespassers have regularly prowled through private lands to birdwatch, sunbathe, backpack, park RV's, camp, hike, fish, horseback ride, motorcycle, collect specimen, etc., etc. Encouraged by the promises implicit in this questionnaire, supported by the coastal act contention that "the coast belongs to all the people" and armed with the attorney general's detailed instructions on how to grab accesses without paying for them, trespassers can lay claim to any access they choose. Since, by their record of lawbreaking and their willingness to cash in on it, people who sign this questionnaire can't possibly qualify as the most honorable people in the world, it doesn't take a seer to predict that no property will be safe from confiscation via trespassing if this questionnaire is held valid. What can happen, will happen.

Protestations by the sponsors of this questionnaire that it is "not goal-oriented" are absurd. If it isn't "goal oriented," then the questionnaire has no usefulness and the costs of preparing the very comprehensive manual and of making the investigations necessary to support acquisition of accesses, is a boondoggle. If it is "goal-oriented," then the questionnaire—and the philosophy behind it—are cause for alarm for every property owner and municipality in the coastal zone.

The attorney general maintains that he is mandated under the Coastal Act to make this survey to "protect the public rights"; and this contention is the most frightening thing about the questionnaire.

The attorney general also is mandated under the California Constitution and the Constitution of the United States to protect the rights of private owners and to uphold the laws against trespassing. Furthermore, he is mandated under the coastal act to protect the coastal environment. This questionnaire ignores all those mandates. It encourages an illegal act; caters to a small segment of the consumptive public while ignoring the needs of the gentle (and by far the majority) users; subverts the coastal act by opening the way for irreversible environmental damage to the coast by reason of overuse by a largely irresponsible public; and disregards the private rights of coastal property owners.

THERE ARE legitimate, open, constitutional ways to protect both the public rights and private rights and the coastal environment. This questionnaire is not among them. The orderly process of designation of public accesses along the coast should take into consideration owners' rights, residential quality, resource capacity, suitability of the site for public use and many other factors. Access, under no conditions, should be determined merely by past, present, or future trespassing patterns.

If this questionnaire is used as the sole—or even as one—criteria for selection of public access, then the coastal act must be amended or repealed.

(Editor's note: The author is a retired petroleum economist who lives in Carmel Highlands. He has been a critic of the state Coastal Commission. For five years, Speer served on the Monterey County Advisory Committee to the regional Coastal Commission.)

WHEN I WAS a child, my most magical moments were spent riding the carousel horses; flying around and around, up and down, on the bravest, most beautiful steeds in the world. I was King Arthur. Or Gallahad, purist of the pure. The Conquering Hero, home from the Quest of the Dragon with the welcoming music full in my ears.

White horses with garlands; black ones with gold and red trappings; sometimes a unicorn, most inspiring of all. On those I became the fabulous princess with golden hair flowing like a river about me, riding the beast that answered to me alone.

Mounted on a tiger, I stalked the jungles, speckled with filtered, flickering light, constantly ready to pounce on those who would defy my might. A lion once took me to Africa where we rode the plains with the giraffe and antelope, watching the zebras zig-zagging across the velt.

Oh, the places I've been on a merry-go-round.

'Round and 'round, on the merry-go-round.

The dreams, and the visions with triumphs abound,

The marvelous, magical music resounds

While the hooves of the horses never touch ground

When I'm riding and riding that merry-go-round.

The beauty, the joy, the happiness sound

Still rings in my ears, through years that compound,

And my love never stops for a merry-go-

Owner affected by R-4 to meet with city officials

THE LARGEST Carmel ad hoc committee ever appointed will meet today to discuss proposed changes to the R-4 residential zone. Some disenchanted property owners and councilmen who backed the legislation will discuss modifications of tough parking and coverage requirements in the zone along Junipero.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. at City Hall. At least 20 city officials, property owners and residents on the committee are expected to attend, according to Robert Stephenson, chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission. Stephenson was appointed by Mayor Gunnar Norberg to be the chairman of the committee.

The two Carmel City Council members appointed by Stephenson are Mike Brown and Helen Arnold. Commissioner Eileen Thompson also will represent the planning commission.

THE SUCCESS of this session and possible future meetings depends on the willingness of both sides to compromise according to Brown.

"I hope the people don't arrive with preconceived thoughts about what has to be. We have to establish which way we are going as a group," Brown said Monday.

On Aug. 7, a divided council voted 3-2 to rezone fewer than three blocks of what was then the C-2 general commercial zone. The ordinance took effect Sept. 7. Norberg and Councilmen Brown and Arnold voted for the rezoning. Councilman Howard Brunn and David Hughes, who resigned over the vote, opposed it.

The R-4 zone is designed to buffer residential areas from commercial districts. Proponents say it encourages low-cost housing in Carmel. The 25 commercial uses it allows are mostly resident-serving types such as laundries and shoe repair shops.

Some property owners in the zone claimed it downzoned their property by restricting allowed uses. A lumberyard owner claimed that the rezoning devalued his property by $1.5 million. Tom Handley, owner of Carmel Builders Supply, made that remark before an ad hoc committee that studied the rezoning in July.

AT ISSUE will be rigid parking and coverage requirements that some property owners say discourages instead of encourages apartment development.

In the R-4 zone, parking is considered as coverage. In most Carmel zones, parking is regarded as open space. That enables developers to cover more of the land with buildings, according to Robert Griggs, the Carmel city planning director.

Another parking clause under R-4 requires that all underground parking be below street level. Property owners claim that is virtually impossible due to the sloping topography along Junipero. "I'm not convinced it's a perfect ordinance," Stephenson said on Monday. "But if they (property owners) have nothing new to say, I'll try to shut them up. We don't want to rehash the same old things," he said.

"I've managed to not even think about the meeting," commented George Rausch, owner of the four-unit Ocean View Lodge. Rausch plans to attend the meeting, but objects to the large size of the committee. "There may be too many people for a serious discussion, but I'm going in with a clear conscience," Rausch commented.

The scheduling of future R-4 committee meetings depends on the success of today's session, Stephenson said.

River Inn must file impact report

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors agreed with its planning commission last week and ordered an environmental impact report on the expansion proposal for the Carmel River Inn.

The EIR also was endorsed by attorney Myron Etienne Jr., who owns the motel property.

Etienne wants to build a 45-unit motel addition on an eight-acre parcel adjacent to the Carmel River. There are 21 rental cabins on the property now and an existing 19-unit motel on an adjacent parcel in the same motel complex.

Forklift, car collide

An 83-year-old Carmel woman is in fair condition at Community Hospital this week after the car she was riding in collided with a forklift on Carmel Valley Road on Friday.

Louise White Halbert was admitted to the hospital shortly after 8:10 a.m. when the accident occurred. Her husband, John Sanford Halbert, 88, of Carmel, refused treatment for minor injuries. He was driving the car.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Lawrence Alvin Conner, 54, of Fremont, had parked a truck on the south shoulder of Carmel Valley Road just west of Garland Ranch Regional Park. He was driving a forklift off the truck when the accident occurred.

The forklift was partially in the roadway when it was struck by Halbert's eastbound car, the CHP said. Conner was not injured.

The Mid-Valley Fire Department responded to the scene with rescue equipment and an ambulance.

Complaint delays lease of corporation yard

The objections from a neighbor Monday prevented the Carmel City Council from approving a five-year lease for a two-acre corporation yard behind the Carmel Mission Basilica.

The property belongs to Max Hodges. After nearly eight months of negotiations, the city had agreed to pay Hodges $500 per month to use the property to store sand, wood chips and clean fill. But objections from a resident who lives across from the yard have delayed the lease approval.

The storage yard use would not be permitted in a county area zoned R-1, claimed Dan J. Daly, a retired attorney. He lives in an unincorporated area across from the Hodges property. "We're a little scared of the city of Carmel coming in there," Daly said.

"I don't see why you should take over an R-1 zone outside the city. Perhaps the parking lot at Sunset Center would be a more appropriate place," he suggested.

George Brehmer, the city attorney, has not signed the lease. The council unanimously voted to defer signing until Brehmer verifies that a storage yard is a legal use in the zone.

said. "They need ranch foremen, ranch help."

The ROP programs, he said, do not offer "advanced training like the junior colleges or technical and vocational schools. We aim to train students for entry-level jobs."

MANY JOBS in agriculture require more training at Hartnell or Monterey Peninsula College. Some ROP students go on to Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo for more instruction.

For those who don't, the jobs at least "pay better than minimum wage," Phillips said. "That's something right there."

And many times they help students with career decisions: do they really want a job in farming?

"Some find they don't like that kind of work," Phillips said. "Most have not worked in the field before, have not had real-life experience. The classes help them make career decisions."

Results from the ROP programs are variable, he said. Some students stay in the field, others get advanced training, still others drop it entirely.

"It's a changeable thing," he said.

For students who want them, "in the Salinas and Carmel Valley area, there are jobs," Phillips said.

Some are new and different, not traditional farm jobs at all. Mrs. Meyenberg worked for several weeks at Bruce Church Co. in Salinas, coordinating worldwide produce shipments by telephone. Church is a major produce supplier in the West.

"You could call her a telephone operator," Phillips told the board of trustees, "but she was more than that. And that was a job in agriculture."

Cal-Am to appeal unfavorable ruling

CALIFORNIA-AMERICAN Water Co. will appeal an unfavorable ruling on its request to drill four new wells at the mouth of Carmel Valley. The wells could yield 5,000 acre-feet a year, putting the district at its maximum water production capacity.

The four wells, if pumped to capacity, would produce almost half the water used in the last 12 months by Cal-Am customers on the Monterey Peninsula.

The appeal involves a decision to require an environmental impact report on the effects of the wells. It was handed down Aug. 30 by the Monterey County Planning Commission on a 4-2 vote. The county board of supervisors is scheduled to hear the appeal Tuesday, Oct. 24 at 2 p.m. in Salinas.

Attorneys for Cal-Am claim the EIR would delay the project and duplicate a "vast wealth of information" already available about the impact of high-yield wells in the Lower Valley.

The company wants to drill three wells near Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club and one on the Rancho Canada Golf Course. The combined yield would be 5,000 acre-feet per year, giving the district a total capacity of 22,000 acre-feet per year.

For the 12-month period ending Aug. 31, district customers used 10,404 acre-feet. Information officer Leslie Kelsay said normal district use during a non-drought period is estimated at 15,000 acre-feet annually.

The full 22,000 acre-feet probably will not be needed until "about the turn of the century," she said. But addition of the wells now will give the district "drought back-up" if other wells or the two reservoirs are low.

THE FIRM WILL SEEK permission to build a second iron removal plant in conjunction with the four wells because of high concentrations of iron and manganese in the Lower Valley water.

Some solar technology is already here. If you want to heat your home, your water supply or your swimming pool, you can buy solar units today that will do the job. PG&E is currently involved in more than 80 solar projects to help Californians make better use of these heating systems.

But heat isn't electricity.

Manufacturing electricity from the sun's rays is a lot further off. The technology is not yet developed to convert the sun's energy into electricity in an efficient and affordable way. Meaningful amounts of electricity won't be coming from solar sources before the end of the century.

PG&E is working on such projects. For example, we are partners in building an experimental sunlight-to-electricity plant that will produce small amounts of power by the early 1980's. But the cost of this electricity will be about 30 times as much as that from a new conventional plant.

According to government estimates, even by the end of the century, the sun will provide no more than 10% of our electric needs. In the meantime, we'll need government approvals to build conventional plants to help meet your growing demands.

If you have any questions about Solar Energy, write PG&E, Box 3728, San Francisco, CA 94106.

Until solar electricity is ready, we must build other kinds of power plants. PG and E

Commissioners dislike littered appearance

Crackdown on showcase window decals sought

TWO CARMEL planning commission members have urged the city to crackdown on shops that display window and door decals. The decals often advertise stores that accept Visa, Mastercharge or American Express cards. The commissioners claim the decals are messy and illegal advertising.

Robert Stephenson, the commission chairman, and Commissioner Sandy Swain both want the decal issue reviewed by the commission. The issue was brought up when the commission was seated as the Board of Adjustments on Wednesday of last week. Continued discussion is scheduled when the commission meets again Oct. 18.

Four months ago, the Carmel City Council asked businessmen to voluntarily remove the decals. Some complied. But about half of them didn't, according to Robert Griggs, the city planning director.

The decals are classified as signs. All exterior signs, including those affixed to store windows and doors, require planning commission approval. The signs are illegal, according to City Attorney George Brehmer. But, so far, the city has let them stay up. "We've let them slide," Griggs admitted.

CAN WE please do something about decals on store windows?" Miss Swain asked the commission. Councilman Howard Brunn asked the City Council that same question five months ago. But he answered it himself. He decided to take his plea to the Carmel Business Association (CBA). Brunn asked businessmen at a CBA meeting to take the decals down. The message also was printed in a CBA newsletter.

Two merchants who display decals said they would take them down. But one of them didn't like the idea.

"It would hurt my business if I took them down. I'd have no where else to put them," said Randall Fred, owner of Chinois restaurant.

"I don't like the way they look, either, but they do attract customers," Fred said.

"I couldn't care less one way or the other," said Agop Agacanian, owner of La Renaissance Jewelry. "I'd be happy to move them if the city wanted me to," he said.

"The people who buy jewelry are going to buy it whether the signs are there or not," Agacanian said.

EMBLEM DECALS give many Carmel storefronts a "littered" look that is undesirable, two Carmel planning commissioners have said. This is the view of a door to a restaurant along Ocean Avenue.

Gasper Cardinale, the association president, has asked all local businessmen to take down the decals.

"The decals are offensive. I've been wanting to do something about them for a long time," Stephenson said at the meeting.

But that is not a job for Stephenson or the Planning Commission, according to City Administrator Jack Collins. "Enforcement is up to the building department, not the planning commission," Collins said Friday. Collins said he will meet with Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham this week to discuss city policy on the decals.

Except for a sign warning of a burglar alarm system inside, Brunn said he has removed all decals from the windows and doors of his store, the Carmel Bay Company.

EACH STORE is allowed one decal warning of a burglar alarm inside, according to the City Code. The decals are usually just a few inches in size. They can be up to 140 square inches.

But nearly 150 Carmel merchants also have posted decals that show they belong to "Operation Doorshake," an evening safety check operated by the Carmel Police Department. Merchants pay $24 each year for police to check that their front doors are locked. There is some question if the stickers are legal under City Code.

The most flagrant posting of the illegal credit card decals is done by florists, travel agents, restaurants and gift shops, according to Griggs.

"They cause a littered appearance. Sometimes they make it difficult to see what merchants sell," Griggs said.

City enforcement regarding the decals should be "all or nothing," Brehmer suggested. "It might be best to establish a rule that says no decals on any window," Brehmer stated.

Present city policy is to allow most existing decals, but the city requests new businesses not to put them up, according to Griggs.

A VERY LARGE piece of cheese was at the corner of 10th and Casanova. There was a watchrat on duty, protecting the cheese from the neighboring rats and mice. These neighbors were upset and gathered together for a protest meeting.

"That cheese is 11 nibbles too tall," one mouse said. "It blocks my view of the cat."

"It's clearly a party cheese," said another. "There are certainly two guest slices and the holes are more than the allowed 20 per cent of solid cheese. I move we take our complaints to the Kangaroo Rat Council."

"So moved and seconded. We'll march immediately to see Mayor Rat." And off they went.

At Toady Hall, the complaints having been duly filed, the Kangaroo Rat Council was in session.

"Your Honor, the very essence of the sanctity of the nest is at stake. Our nests are being overshadowed by this big cheese. It makes our cheeses look small and puny by comparison. No rat should be allowed to be such a big wheel."

"We have a report in council from an architect mouse who recommends some changes to bring the cheese in question into conformation with our pack code, though I must say, how the pack inspector passed on these variances, I'll never know. That inspector better shape up or he'll be out on his tail," said Mayor Rat.

The Rat Pro Tem took the floor. "This is preposterous. The pack attorney has ruled that I am definitely not in a conflict of interest position. I vote for the sanctity of the nest, the beautification and preservation of our holes, the resident-rats in perpetuity above all else. Just because I know a rat in particular does not mean that I will not vote for the best solution to the pack as a whole.

"As for my revered council colleague, I put to her that her own cheese, having been made, has drawn some questioning glances as to plate coverage. I am tired of being criticized. If any rat out there wants this job, let him run for the office. And I'm also tired of being accused of fave-rat-ism."

"It takes one to know one," said a voice from the audience.

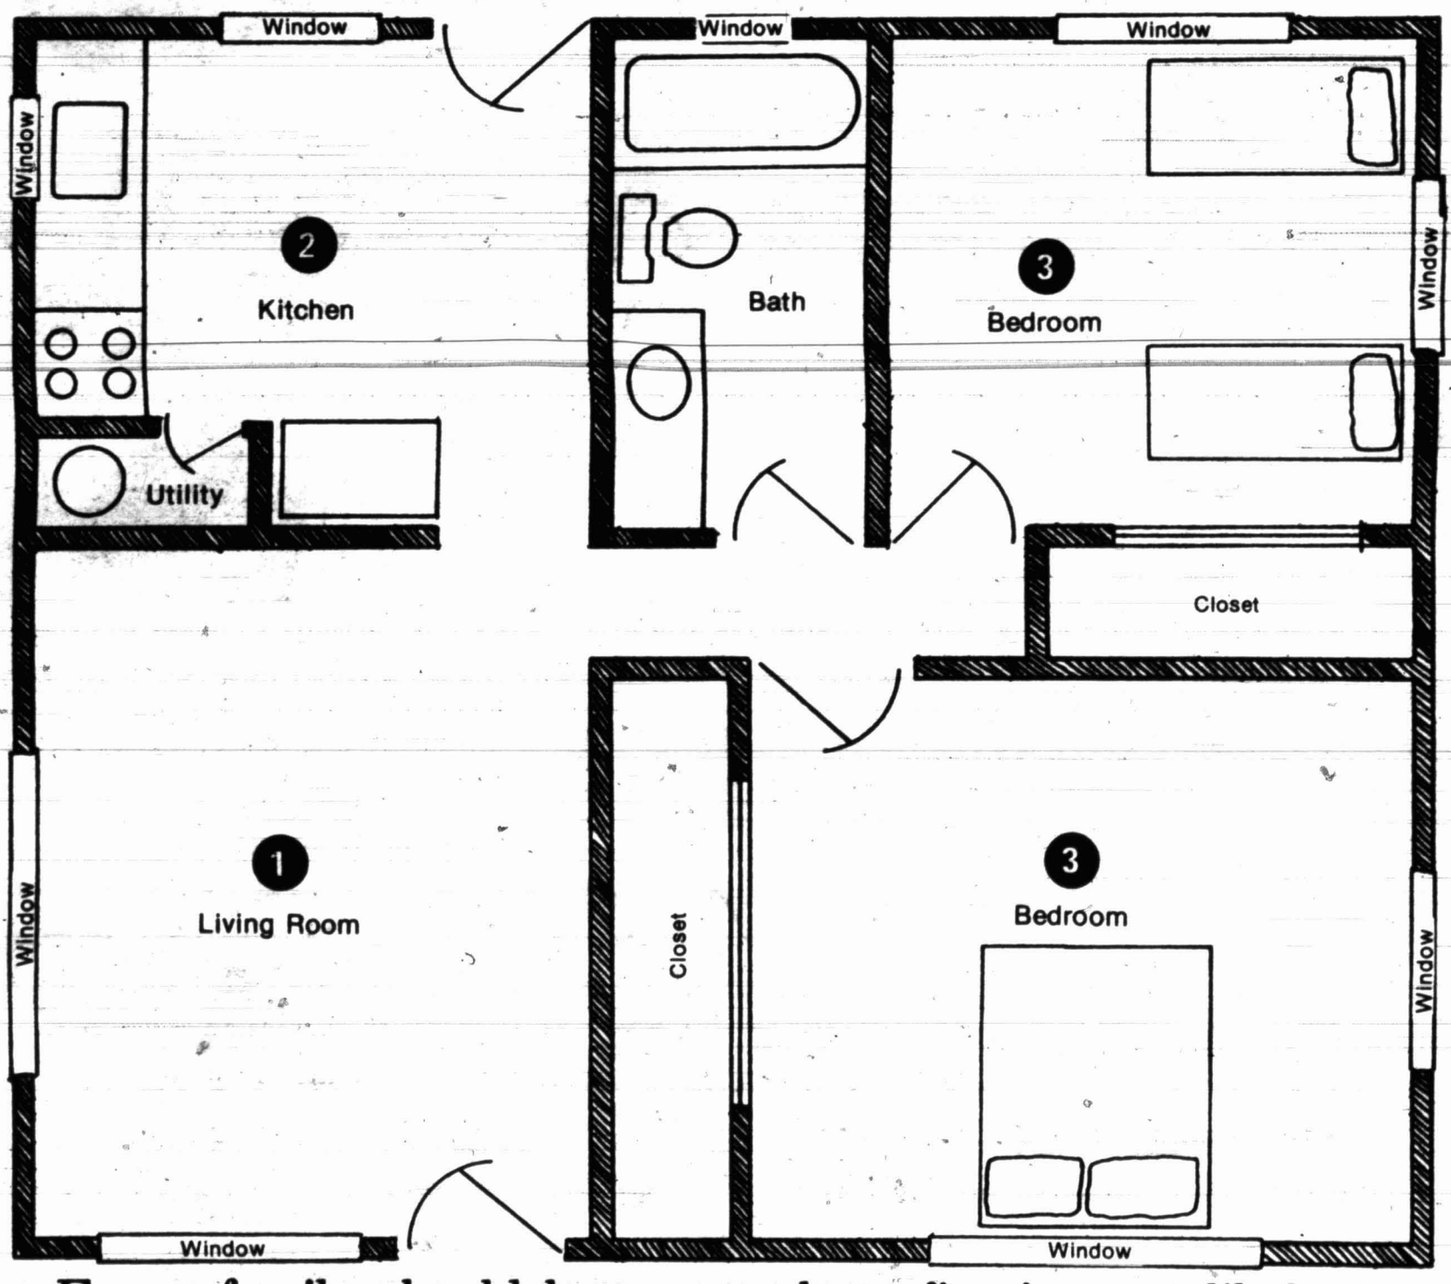
Take the time to assure your loved ones are safe

Fire. The word alone can make you shudder. Here are some wise precautionary measures you can take this weekend to make your home safer. National Fire Prevention Week starts Sunday and it is a good time to reassess how safe your family is at home. Besides heeding the tips to the right, every resident should have at least one smoke detector and a reliable fire extinguisher. Larger homes need more detectors, but a 2.5-pound extinguisher rated for A-, B- and C-type fires is adequate. Place it near the kitchen. In addition, those who live in two-story houses should have a chain-link ladder to use if they must escape through an upstairs window. The single most important thing to do this weekend, however, is to devise a plan for the family's escape in case of a fire. The plan should be determined ahead of time and the family members should practice it together frequently.

If it happened...



Every family should have a plan of escape in case of fire. If this were your home, how would you escape? You should know where all the windows and doors are and their proximity to areas where fire is most likely to occur. Statistics show the highest probability of fire is in the ❶ living room; second likely is the ❷ kitchen; and third is the ❸ bedrooms.

❶ Water heater

HEAT FROM THE pilot light can ignite stored newspaper, clothing stacked nearby or even fumes from a gasoline-powered lawnmower in the area. To be safe, store these items outside the room where the water heater is situated. If you can't do that, store them at least five feet away. Carmel fireman Jim Kelsey inspects a water heater that has been wisely placed in a steel tray to guard against sparks. He found a macrame hanging laying near the tray, however, which was a hazard. Kelsey has his hand on the gas valve to the heater.

❷ House sign

MOST HOUSES in Carmel do not have house numbers. Firefighters suggest that you put your name in large letters somewhere visible from the street. By doing so, you will speed the arrival of the firemen when you need them.

3 Weeds

CLEAR ALL WEEDS and brush within 30 feet of your house. If you are on a hill, 70 feet is safer. Pine needles also should be cleared from the roof. Your chimney should have a screen at the top to arrest sparks. But to be absolutely safe, the tinder it could ignite on your roof or in your yard also should be removed.

This weekend, spend an hour to safeguard your family.

Here are 7 tips that apply to Carmel homes.

6 Fire ladder

ABOUT HALF of those who successfully escape a home fire have to go through an open window. If you sleep on a second floor, or even if you have a single-story house but it is on a sloping lot, a fire ladder is necessary. They retail for about $25; $30 to $35 for one to be used in a three-story house. David Jones of County Service Areas 42 and 43 demonstrates here.

4 Pine pitch

FIREWOOD GETS more and more expensive. And many people buy pine to economize. But remember if you burn pine, the smoke that rises up the chimney is laden with pitch that is combustible. The most hazardous time is in late fall, when you build a fire to beat the night chill. Pitch has built up along the flue walls and after drying during the summer, it can catch on fire. When it happens, a quick but scorching blast of flame comes out of the fireplace and a screen cannot block it.

5 Floor furnace

SCORES OF OLDER houses in Carmel have floor furnaces. They supply heat efficiently, but many people carelessly put throw rugs over them or chairs close to them. There were two fires in Carmel during the past year where the source was traced to a floor furnace. Jim Kelsey, a Carmel Fire Department volunteer, spotted this hazard.

7 Circuit overload

CONVENTIONAL 110-VOLT sockets are not designed to feed more than one large appliance. Often in older homes, there is no 220-volt wiring. Yet people will try to make them drive microwave ovens, dishwasher and washer and dryer units. The drain— whether 220 on 110 or simply too many plugs in one socket— will heat the wiring and could start a fire. If your lights dim significantly when a major appliance is operating, firefighters say an electrician should inspect the wiring. The same goes if you continually blow a fuse.

One-way street proposal advances to the planning commission

STREET SIGNS needed if streets become one-way in Carmel's business district would cost at least $4,300.

That is what Peter Hom said, a traffic engineer from the state Department of Transportation. Hom's traffic study here last year prompted the addition of more than 50 new stop signs.

Hom offered the estimate in a telephone interview last week. Traffic signs cost about $25 each, he said. Carmel Police Chief William Ellis estimated the new system would require 174 new directional signs. Some of the cost could be underwritten by federal funds, Hom said. The public works department could install the signs.

THOSE WHO drive for a living in Carmel seem to have mixed emotions about one-way streets. But a city traffic subcommittee had no doubts on Tuesday of last week. It unanimously forwarded a favorable recommendation to the Carmel Planning Commission. The commission is scheduled to review the proposal Wednesday, Oct. 18. It could reach the City Council in November.

The new system would require only one or two new stop signs, according to Ellis, a committee member. Some 57 existing stop signs would have to be rearranged, however, he said.

Under the proposal, the one-way street grid would run north and south from Mission to Lincoln and east and west from Fifth to Seventh. San Carlos would be a main southbound route. Dolores would become a northbound street. The system would cover all of the business district.

Odello hotel plan awaits initial OK

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will decide in two weeks if Bruno Odello should prepare a specific plan for development of his agricultural land on Highway 1 south of the Carmel River.

Sabastian Bordonaro, architect for Odello on a hotel-residential-commercial project proposed for the 134 acres east of Highway 1, asked the supervisors Tuesday for permission to proceed with the specific plan.

He complained that confusion and planning department delays have left the development in limbo for 16 months. That is when the planning commission first authorized Odello to prepare an environmental impact report.

Planning Director Ed DeMars asked for the additional two weeks to meet with Bordonaro and work out the exact terms under which he will proceed so there will be no more confusion. The supervisors concurred on a 4-0 vote. Supervisor Kenneth Blohm was absent.

Handley to be honored on Saturday

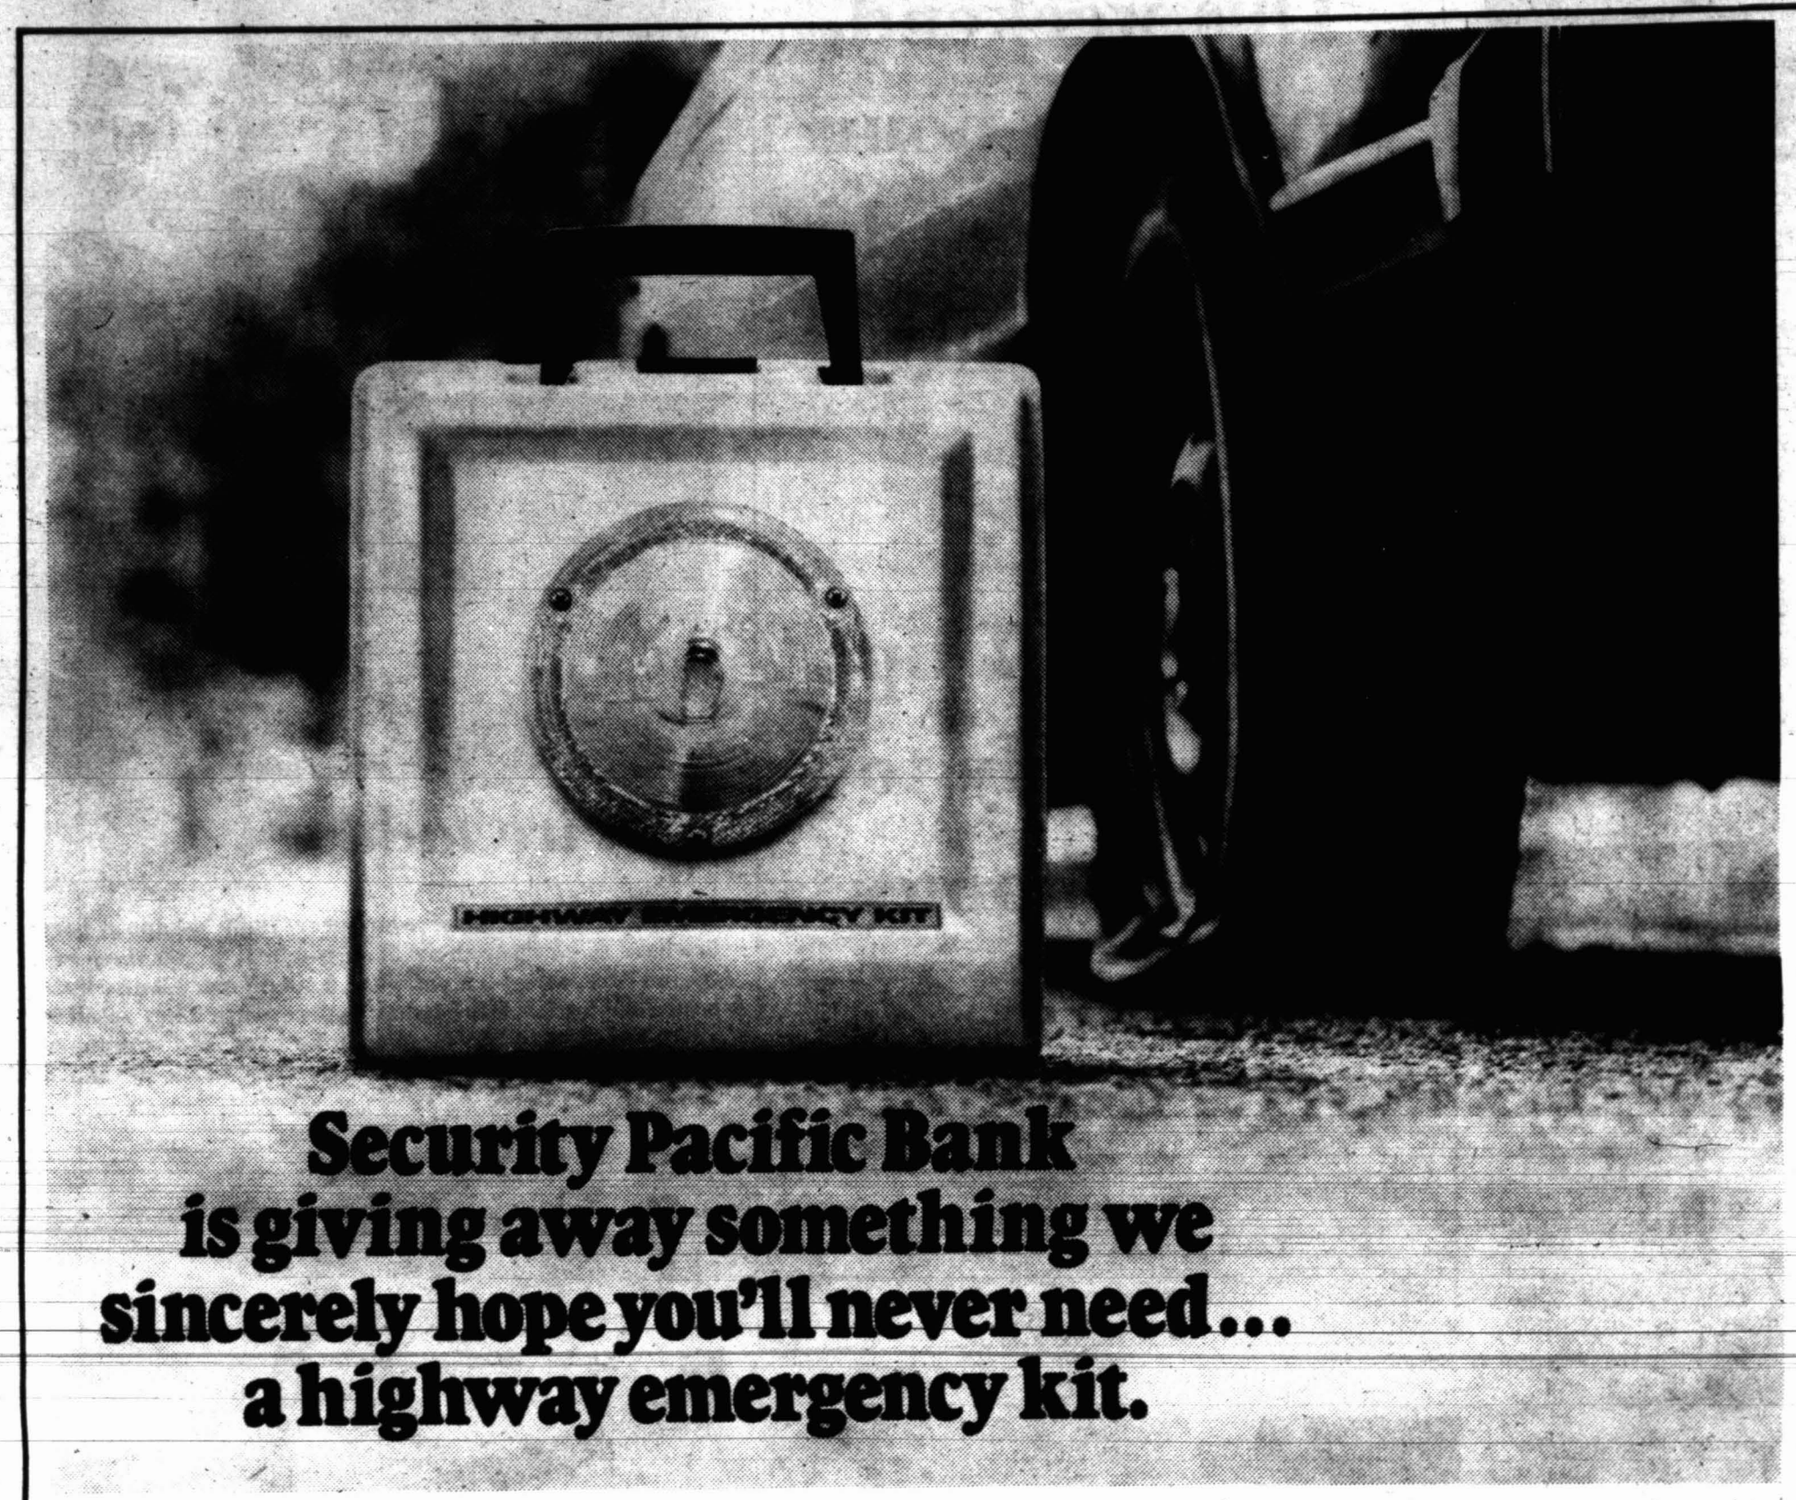
Longtime Carmel resident and businessman James O. Handley will be saluted at the Carmel High School football game Saturday when the pressbox at the stadium will be named in his honor.

Clayton Neill Jr., president of the Carmel district board of trustees, called it a "splendid idea" when the idea was raised last week. The high school boosters club will direct the ceremonies.

Handley, the retired owner of Carmel Builders Supply, has "done a lot for the school district and the community," according to John Whitaker, assistant coach of the varsity team. Handley had been hospitalized with cancer earlier this year, but now is back at home.

Handley served on the school board for nine years, five of them as the board president.

He contributes $1,000 each year for a scholarship at the school.



Security Pacific Bank is giving away something we sincerely hope you'll never need... a highway emergency kit.

Just let us help you finance a new or used car, truck or RV.

We hope you'll never need the flashing yellow light that plugs into your cigarette lighter. Or the flares or first aid kit. Or the fire extinguisher, tire inflator, orange safety vest, or distress flag.

The flashlight and red shade might come in handy, if you stop to help someone who didn't get a new vehicle when they needed it.

Of course, anyone could run out of gas and need the siphon included in the kit.

Clearly, if you aren't thinking of a new or used car, truck or recreational vehicle, a free emergency kit won't convince you to let us give you a loan for one. But if you're thinking about it anyway, perhaps the free kit and a special rate reduction for having a Master Charge or Visa card with us, and another reduction on your rate for using our Automatic Transfer Service to repay the loan will sway you in our direction.

We'll give you the free highway emergency kit if you lease a new car from us, too.

This offer ends on October 31, 1978.

So don't think about it too long. We'll try to make getting your new vehicle so easy you hardly have to think about it.

Prop. 5 seen as harassment

No-smoking measure finds little support among businessmen

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

MOST BUSINESSMEN from Carmel and Carmel Valley will take the path of least resistance if voters approve Proposition 5, the anti-smoking initiative on the Nov. 7 state ballot.

Restaurants have become battlegrounds since non-smokers, armed with undeniable facts that smoking is harmful, have insisted that sections be reserved for those who do not smoke. But Prop. 5 would expand the number and variety of public places that would have to protect the rights of non-smokers.

In Carmel, there are four anti-smoking ordinances already on the books. They are seldom enforced. So, for many, the prospect of Prop. 5 passing may become the proverbial last straw on the camel's back. They view it as a form of harassment.

"It's getting to be too much. You just don't tell Americans what to do," snapped Charles Ober. He owns Charlie O and Co., a restaurant in Carmel.

"It's going to create havoc," predicted Ned Thomas, owner of the Buckeye restaurant in Carmel Valley Village.

"What I've heard about the law has all been on the radio. I haven't read the law. But to legislate something like this is wrong, very wrong."

Although there are strident objections, most of those who were contacted indicated they would reluctantly comply with the terms of Prop. 5.

Restaurants would be required to have sections for non-smokers. Most already do. But the owners also would have to post signs at the entrances indicating there is a non-smoking area and how many seats are available in it.

In shops and art galleries, smoking also would be prohibited. Offices present a different problem. If smokers wanted to smoke, the management would be obligated to shield non-smokers. Television advertisements against Prop. 5 have suggested a wall would have to be built to divide smokers from non-smokers. The law actually says barriers are required only "where practicable" and it suggests using existing building configurations to minimize the drift of smoke.

Opponents also have said smoking would be allowed at rock music concerts, but not at others that feature jazz or country and western music, for example. There is no mention of smoking allowed at concerts other than those where rock music is played. Most observers assume smoking would be permitted then by virtue of the omission in the law.

THE PINE CONE contacted 25 office managers, restaurateurs, merchants and government officials in the area to determine how Prop. 5 would affect them.

Few merchants look forward to telling customers to put out their cigarettes, though a few said they would. Quipped one restaurateur, "I picture a policeman on his way in to arrest a lawbreaker, then forgetting to extinguish his own cigarette."

"We have a lot more important things to do than run around seeing who's smoking cigarettes," said Carmel Police Chief William Ellis. "You can't enforce every law. You'd need a police force 1,000 times the size it is now."

CHARLES OBER, the Prop. 5 critic, said he accommodates customers who request no-smoking areas. But the requests are infrequent. "I get them about as often as customers who request a sliced tomato salad instead of a green salad," he said.

"I'm in favor of it," said Flaherty Swanston, owner of Flaherty's Fish Market and Oyster Bar in Carmel. Should Prop. 5 pass, Swanston said he would ban smoking in his restaurant.

A smoker himself, Swanston allows smoking in his 33-seat restaurant although he would like to ban it. "Too many of my local repeat customers insist on smoking," he explained.

Ed Haber, owner of the Covey restaurant at the Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley, said he is establishing a no-smoking room in the new Carmel restaurant he owns. It is scheduled to open here next week. If the 25-seat section works in the new Fish House on the Park, owner Haber said he will test it at the Covey restaurant, too.

"We're doing this on our own volition. I think we're one of the first in Northern California to establish the non-smoking sections. When we thought of it, we knew nothing of Prop. 5," Haber added.

Chain-smoking John Bikas, owner of the Village Corner restaurant in Carmel, opposes Prop. 5. "The restaurant business is very delicate. Customers are easily offended when you tell them what they can't do," he explained.

If the law passes, Bikas said he would designate his outdoor seating as the smoking area. Indoor seating would be limited to non-smokers, he said.

A favorite local coffee shop is Sambo's at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. At least half of its customers are smokers, said Guillermo Tamayo, the manager.

The restaurant has no smoking policy. But Tamayo said he would comply with the law, should it pass.

The signs the law would mandate bother Walter Georis, co-owner of two Carmel restaurants, La Boheme and Casanova. "We are becoming too sign oriented. I object to that," he said.

"I also object to someone telling me how to run my business. Each situation has to be dealt with individually," said Georis, a non-smoker. It could hurt his business if non-smoking tables were empty while smoking customers waited to be seated, he said.

I WOULD HAVE to have a structural engineer come through and tell me how to rearrange this place," said Bud Allen, owner of La Playa Hotel, which has a 200-seat restaurant.

"Someone will have to show me how to lay out the dining room. What happens when you get a party of six and only one of them smokes? Where do you seat them?" he asked.

Allen, a non-smoker, said there is only one area in the hotel now designated for non-smokers. "That's my office. I have two no-smoking signs on my desk," he said. Under the proposed law, Allen also would have to designate at least half of his lobby area for non-smokers. Walls to separate the two areas, however, would not be required.

Several other businesses would be affected by Prop. 5.

Take taxicabs. One firm, Village Taxi, serves Carmel and Carmel Valley. The law would allow drivers to smoke in empty cabs, but forbid smoking in cabs with customers.

"Right now the company rules say drivers can't smoke in the cabs at any time," said Sam Colburn, the dispatcher. The law would serve little purpose here, he said.

"It's too evangelical, vindictive and restrictive," said Colburn. Colburn, who said he is a moderate smoker, wants laws regulating drinking and driving, not smoking and driving.

MOVIE THEATERS would have to install illuminated no-smoking signs, similar to exit signs. Again, the theaters contacted already forbid smoking inside.

"I think it would be redundant," said Terry Voss, manager of the Carmel Center Cinemas. No-smoking regulations already are enforced in the theater, he said.

Smoking has never been allowed in the Tantamount Theatre in Carmel Valley. It is located too far from fire hydrants, explained Francois Martin, the owner. Martin said he announces the smoking ban prior to all shows.

A Carmel art gallery co-owner said she would support and enforce the proposition if it passed. "Sure, I'd ask customers to put out their cigarettes," said Betty Jo Cost, an owner of the James Peter Cost Gallery.

Smoking is discouraged, but allowed in the gallery. "I'm offended by no-smoking signs," she explained.

Except in portions of employee lounges, smoking also would be banned in indoor work places.

SOME CARMEL and Carmel Valley offices have already established their own smoking rules. The general rule for desk workers at Wells Fargo Bank in Carmel is that if a customer lights up, then the employee can light up, too, said Peter C. Wright, the manager. Tellers are prohibited from smoking at their posts, he said.

What would Wright do if Prop. 5 became law? "I don't know what I'd do if a customer walked in smoking a cigarette. I doubt if I'd tell him to put it out," he said.

Kidder, Peabody and Co., near the mouth of Carmel Valley, has no policy on smoking, "but we've never had any problems," said Jim Stephenson, office manager at the stock brokerage.

Only a few of the 20 employees there smoke. Prop. 5 would have "no effect at all" there, he said.

Current smoking rules at Carmel High School would remain virtually unchanged by Prop. 5, said Principal Dan Stevenson. Smoking is banned on campus except in an indoor faculty lounge and an outdoor student smoking area.

Ironically, the law would liberalize the smoking restrictions at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

Smoking is prohibited in all private and semi-private rooms. Prop. 5 would prohibit smoking in private rooms. But it would allow for smoking in semi-private rooms if both patients requested it in writing. Only four of the 172 rooms at the hospital are semi-private, according to Fred Sorri, director of public information.

The hospital allows smoking in some lobby areas. "The goal of the hospital is for no smoking at all. But we feel such a rule could impose additional hardships on people during already traumatic times," he said.

CIVIL RIGHTS attorney Francis Heisler, a non-smoker from Carmel, opposes the proposition. "If a restaurant owner is going to tell customers that they can't eat in his place if they smoke, he has that right. But I don't know if that should be a job for a legislative body," Heisler said.

Monterey County Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel said he is "not ready to jump on the Prop. 5 bandwagon." He dislikes cigarette smoke, but said the law is poorly written.

"I don't enjoy smoke-filled rooms, even though that is the nature of politics," he said. Farr has attempted to outlaw smoking in the supervisors' board room, "but I could never muster a second vote," he said.

"Any law you pass ought to be enforceable. This one is not. I don't think we ought to pass bad laws," Farr said.

Assemblyman Henry J. Mello, D-Watsonville, said he is troubled with the bill's language. Mello objects to the portion of the law that would allow smoking at rock concerts, but ban smoking at other indoor musical events. Still, he said he supports the law.

He disapproves of the "selected treatment" in the law and called it "a heck of a mistake in verbiage." But Mello, who quit smoking 10 years ago, said, "It will eliminate smoke for those who are offended by it."

Carmel City Attorney George Brehmer also is bothered by the bill's language. He said the law's treatment may be inequitable. But he still supports it.

Said Brehmer, "The public has been imposed upon by smokers for years. One can smoke, but a non-smoker in a room with a smoker cannot avert the end result—smoke."

Signs would be required; barriers would not.

Deputy will work at high school

THE CARMEL SCHOOL board reluctantly agreed last week to have a school resource officer from the Monterey County Sheriff's Department come to the high school campus this year.

The board members agreed on a 3-1 vote to participate in the pilot program. But only after they were assured the district would be allowed to help pick the officer and determine how he will be used at the school.

Trustees Richard Wilsdon, Elizabeth Bell and Clayton Neill supported the move. Trustee Frances Gaver was opposed. Pamela Smith was absent.

The officer will be hired under a $14,000 federal law enforcement grant given to the sheriff's department as part of a three-year program, according to Det. Sgt. Norman Hicks.

Next year, the department will add a second officer at North County High School and in the third year another deputy will be assigned to the Carmel grades kindergarten through eighth if the district wishes.

Doug Pease, a financial planner from Carmel Valley, questioned if the district would hire the officer on its own if the sheriff's department didn't have grant money.

Superintendent Carl Wilsey said it would depend on other district priorities, but he pointed out that the position is being paid for with federal dollars, not district funds.

Board opposition arose because of confusion about exactly what the officer will do.

Hicks said he will definitely not be a "cop on campus." Beyond that, details of his duties will have to be worked out with Principal Dan Stevenson and high school faculty members.

Hicks said the man will be at least a three-year veteran and will wear street clothes. He probably will do some teaching about citizen responsibilities under the law. Hicks said he also envisions the man doing crisis counseling and meeting informally with students to talk about law enforcement.

Mrs. Gaver questioned the need for an additional crisis counselor when the district already has a community counselor and access to the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project.

Stevenson said he views the deputy as "another resource officer" he will be "glad to have" on campus.

Pease asked the board if they could justify spending the $14,000 expense in light of pressing educational needs.

Wilsdon said the money is not from district funds and would go to another school if Carmel refused the officer.

Wilsey said the sheriff's office "feels in the long run it will save taxpayers' money" by "having young people who understand and respect the law." They would commit fewer crimes and produce fewer law enforcement expenses, he said.

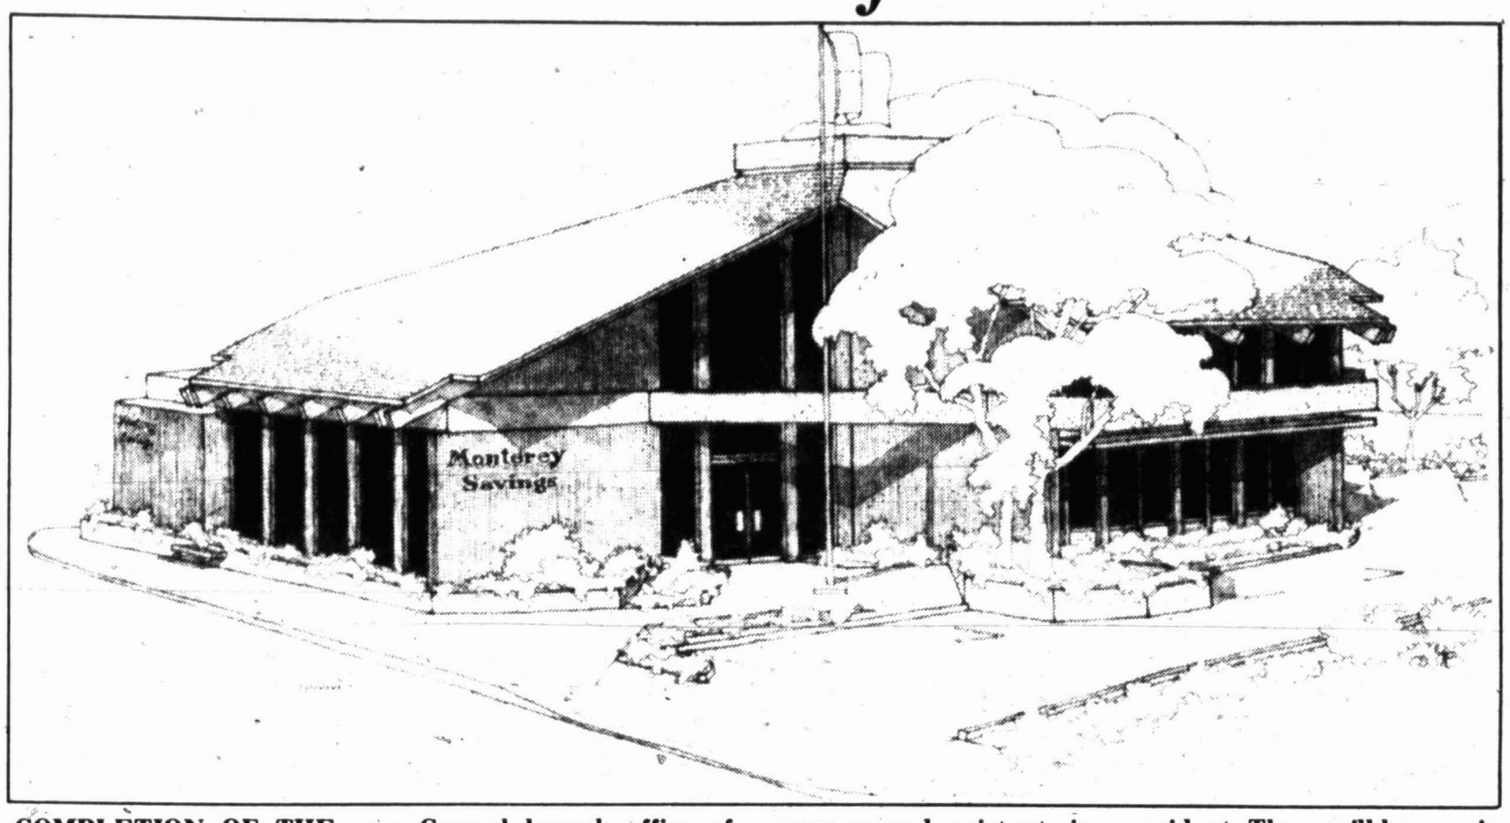
Wilsdon agreed to support the program because he has "faith" in Wilsey and Stevenson, who endorsed it. The two also appended five conditions to the approval, accepted by the board, making Stevenson supervisor of the officer on campus and giving the district veto power over the officer if he doesn't work out.

While routine disciplinary actions and violations would be handled by the school staff, Hicks said the officer would intervene as a policeman if he saw a major crime taking place on campus.

"A doctor can go on vacation, but if he sees someone in dire need, he helps them," Hicks said.

Mrs. Bell, who reluctantly seconded the motion to participate, asked the board to get a progress report by March.

Peek at the future



COMPLETION OF THE new Carmel branch office of Monterey Savings and Loan Association is not expected until July, but this architect's drawing shows how it will look when the work is done. The office will be situated at Sixth and San Carlos where site grading is nearly complete. The building will cover 27 per cent of the 12,000-square-foot lot, according to Robert A. Giraudo, the branch manager and assistant vice-president. There will be a main floor covering 3,200 square feet, a basement work area and a second story for suites. Business guests of the association will use the sleeping quarters, he said. The view pictured here is looking west along Sixth. The Carmel Fire Department is directly across the street from the office site. Parking spaces will occupy 40 per cent of the site.

Details of post office subdivision plan disclosed

A complex of offices and shops proposed for the Carmel Post Office subdivision will be reviewed by Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon next Thursday.

The proposal by Carmel Point Investments calls for five buildings and an underground garage totaling 36,000 square feet. They would be situated on a 1.38-acre parcel.

The complex would be located on the east side of a new access road off Rio Road, just northwest of the planned Carmel post office.

The developers are asking for five separate buildings to "minimize the scale and mass" of the complex, according to their use permit application.

The area is zoned for commercial and professional office development.

Owners of the property are Ed Brown of Homes of Distinction Real Estate in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center and Richard Dziedzic of World Savings and Loan Association in Monterey. Gene Takagawa of Monterey is the architect.

An art gallery is included among the shops they plan in the complex. No other specific shops are mentioned in their application.

The proposal comes before Slimmon at 1:30 p.m. in the board of supervisors' chambers in Salinas. A use permit hearing will be scheduled for a future meeting.

If approved, the development would be the first commercial complex allowed in the new post office subdivision. A three-story office building proposed there by Herma Smith Curtis and Henry Laskin was rejected by the Monterey County Planning Commission last month because the building was deemed too tall for the area.

Architect Boris Jacoubowsky said there is "no progress to report" on a redesign of that building.

What is an Annuity?

It's income for life -- similar to Society Security and your pension. Which annuity plan is best?

The Refund Plan is usually recommended for one or two people, because it provides an income you can't outlive, and further guarantees that you or your beneficiaries can never get back less than you invest. The Refund Plan for two is called a Joint and Survivor Refund Plan.

 Current Rates for Refund Plans of $100 a Month for Life*

Marriott hearing delayed until Blohm recovers

The Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge proposal will get a hearing before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday, Oct. 24. The hearing was scheduled last Tuesday, but the board postponed it because of the illness of Supervisor Kenneth Blohm.

Attorney Gerald Dalton, representing developer Winthrop Carmel Inc., asked for the delay until the full board could hear the matter.

Blohm is expected back next Tuesday. He underwent surgery two weeks ago.

The board hearing is at 2:30 p.m. It will deal with the legal issue of whether the proposed 376-room hotel is consistent with area master plans.

The Monterey County Planning Commission ruled Aug. 30 that the hotel is inconsistent with the Carmel Valley Master Plan, the Lower Carmel Valley amendment to that plan, the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan and the conservation and open space element of the county general plan.

Dalton submitted a lengthy appeal in an attempt to refute all of the commission's contentions.

The hotel project would go back to the planning commission again if the supervisors sustain the appeal. It would then be evaluated on its merits, including solutions it offers to problems of increased traffic and sewage disposal.

The hearing will be in the supervisors' chambers at Church and Alisal streets in Salinas. It will follow a 2 p.m. hearing of an appeal by California-American Water Co. Cal-Am is asking the board to overturn a planning commission order that the utility prepare an environmental impact report for four Lower Carmel Valley wells it wants to drill.

Council appeal promised

Motel hot tub, putting green ruled 'too comercial'

ROBERT STEPHENSON, chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission, tried to humor civil rights attorney Francis Heisler moments after the commission rebuffed his attempt to let motel guests use a hot tub and putting green at a Carmel motel.

The commission, acting as the Board of Adjustments, had ruled both items were unlawful commercial expansion.

"At least we don't control what happens in motel bedrooms," jibed Stephenson.

"After what I heard here today," Heisler replied, "I'm not so sure about that." Later, Heisler said he would appeal the decision to the Carmel City Council.

In question are improvements made at the Carmel Resort Inn, First and Carpenter, by its new owner, Tong Kim.

"I'd hate to see Carmel present itself as ridiculous. But if this ends up in Superior Court, the court could only rule against the city," said Heisler.

The commission voted 6-1 to bar motel guests from using the indoor hot tub. Kim installed it in August. The tub is illegal because commercial expansion is prohibited in residential zones, the commission ruled. For the same reason, the commission unanimously denied a use permit for the putting green Kim wants to install. The motel is in an R-1 residential zone. In 1967, when the area was rezoned, existing motels were allowed to stay but not to expand.

THE CARMEL CITY Council may not want to do what it did in the last case," Heisler said after the meeting. He alluded to a civil rights case he pressed against Carmel 10 years ago. Heisler convinced the California Supreme Court to declare unconstitutional an urgency ordinance enacted by the council. It barred hippies from sitting in Devendorf Plaza. Despite an appeal by the city, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case.

"I believe I've done everything right. I love it here in Carmel. I don't want to go to court," Kim said after the board session on Wednesday of last week.

During the meeting, Commissioner Donald Davidson argued that the hot tub did not expand commercial use. Motel expansion refers to increasing the number of rental units, he contended. Davidson cited a 1968 council resolution that interpreted its rezoning action of 1967.

"A hot tub is an accepted residential use. If we determine at this point that R-1 motels do not have the right to hot tubs, then we are going to have trouble the next time a resident wants to put in a hot tub. We'd be applying different standards," Davidson said.

"I can't agree," said Stephenson. "Motels there do not have the same privileges as R-1 residences."

MOTELS SHOULD only be used for sleeping purposes, Mrs. Thompson had said. "You can't sleep in a hot tub," she said.

"Does that mean when I wake up in the morning, I have to get out of the motel?" Heisler asked. "I hope this is a mistake and that no one is trying to make a joke of the city of Carmel."

Two of Kim's neighbors spoke on his behalf, but one resident, Natalie Murray, opposed allowing the hot tub and putting green. She said she lives behind the Holiday Guest House and claimed balls from its croquet course come into her backyard. "I wouldn't want to dodge golf balls in my backyard," she told the commissioners.

Leonard J. Cosky, a retired plumbing contractor, and Police Sgt. Thomas Frazier, who testified in uniform, both said the hot tub and putting green would have no adverse effect on their neighborhood.

"I'm concerned about setting precedent. There are two motels in my neighborhood that cause noise problems. This would open up a real can of worms," said Commissioner Sandy Swain.

STEPHENSON ASKED Davidson to explain why he disapproved of the putting green, but approved of the hot tub.

"Hot tubs are usual, but putting greens are unusual residential uses. "The phrase putting green makes me think of Pebble Beach or Rancho Canada. But an indoor hot tub does not change the character of a neighborhood," Davidson explained.

Heisler said, however, "I could not find a single case in California where a putting green or hot tub was considered an expansion of use."

A PLUMBING permit for the hot tub was issued July 27. Thus, Kim escaped design review required for commercial outdoor hot tubs. As the City Code was interpreted, Kim's family could use the tub, but motel guests could not.

Poetry buffs see Jeffers' inspiration through the fog

LOAD 100 people into a pair of buses. Drive through a mystical fog along the rugged Big Sur coast that the late Carmel poet Robinson Jeffers spent a lifetime writing about. Read Jeffers' works as the buses roll 50 miles south and 50 miles back to Carmel.

That unusual event Tuesday raised about $1,500 for the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation. The money will be used to underwrite the drive to raise $100,000 by December. If successful, the foundation will receive a matching grant from the National Historical Trust. It then would make its first payment on Tor House, the literary landmark on Carmel Point that Jeffers helped build nearly 60 years ago. The foundation intends to make a monument in memory of Jeffers. It was poetic justice that the six-hour bus tour took place in the fog. "Jeffers loved the fog. He hated sunshine. He thought it harmed the body," said John Dotson, one of the tour guides.

NO ONE really saw much of "Jeffers Country" because of it. The dense fog cloaked all but the final destination, Julia Pfeiffer Burns State Park in Big Sur. Guides constantly reminded the tour-goers that "we've just passed" such-and-such a point that Jeffers wrote about. Despite the fog, Jeffers enthusiasts were treated to a whirlwind oral tour of his poetry. Before the day ended, selections from nearly 50 of his poems were read. For instance, this selection from The Women at Point Sur was read:

The fog-bank that all day far off had lain slant
On the sea northward, perhaps indeed had drawn inland
And covered the shore like a flood and climbed
Up the hill-slope. . .

Box lunches in pink cartons tied with green ribbons were passed out at the state park.

The luncheon program included brief commentaries on Jeffers by the tour organizers. They included photographer Ansel Adams; G. William Gahagan, acting executive director of the foundation; authors Marlan Beilke and Allston James; Professor Tokuhiro Miura of Tokyo, a Jeffers scholar; David Hughes, Carmel businessman; John Dotson, a teacher; and Fred Farr, president of the foundation board of directors.

On the way home, bus gossip turned to the subject of who knew Jeffers, and where they used to see him in Carmel. "I'd spot him at the library all the time," said one woman.

Sponsors hope to make the "Jeffers Country" bus tour an annual event. They are organizing a second tour sometime before Thanksgiving. For more information, contact Gahagan at 624-1813.

A sylvan setting for lunch in Pfeiffer State Park.

February wedding set by Carmel High alums

Vivian Monica Clarke of Carmel and Mark McCabe Brown of Del Rey Oaks have become engaged, the parents of the bride-to-be announced this week.

A FEBRUARY WEDDING is being planned by Vivian Clarke of Carmel and Mark Brown of Del Rey Oaks.

The couple has selected Feb. 25 as their wedding date.

Vivian, a 1976 graduate of Carmel High School, is the daughter of retired U. S. Navy Commander and Mrs. Leo C. Clarke of 26548 Fisher Dr., Carmel. She is employed by M. Raggett Inc. in Carmel.

She has one brother, Leo Clarke Jr., of Visalia and five sisters. They are Patricia Clarke, a junior at Carmel High School; Mrs. James D'Acquisto of Pebble Beach; Mrs. Antone Russo of Monterey; Mrs. Michael Balesteri of Monterey; and Mrs. Rich Calcagno of Monterey.

Mark, who was graduated from Carmel High School in 1974, is the manager of Precision Foreign Auto Parts in Monterey. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Brown of Del Rey Oaks.

His paternal grandmother is Mrs. Lawrence R. Brown of Carmel and his maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Plaxton of Carmel. Plaxton worked in the finance department of the city of Carmel for 20 years.

One of Mark's sisters, Dorie Brown, is a junior at Carmel High School. The other, Julie Brown, is a junior at Long Beach State University. His brother, Bruce Brown, is stationed in Italy with the U. S. Navy.

Mass of mandates on school boards makes him worry

TEACHERS MUST be paid 55 per cent of a school district's budget. Textbooks must portray humane treatment of animals and people. School board members must visit every district campus at least once each term.

These items, listed on 11 single-spaced typewritten pages, are state mandates imposed on Carmel Unified School District and others in California. They range from the absurd to the sublime. Taken as a group, they have Carmel trustee Richard Wilsdon worried.

Wilsdon, an attorney, serves in the California School Boards Association delegate assembly, where he picked up the list.

He is concerned about the growing trend where state education officials circumscribe the role of local school boards.

I WONDER IF pretty soon we will have any local school boards at all," he told the other trustees last week at a board meeting.

He expanded on that theme in an interview later in the week.

"These are the requirements when the state provides 35 per cent of our income," Wilsdon said. "What will they be like when they provide 100 per cent?"

Because of Proposition 13 and the Serrano-Priest court decision, there has been more talk of financing education entirely through the state. This would ensure equal per-pupil funding in all districts and take the burden of financing education off the property taxpayer.

But, Wilsdon said, it also could erode the already diminished role local school boards have in setting policy for their districts.

And he pointed to the list as an example of existing limits.

"A lot of these are things like the Hart Bill requirements (setting minimum proficiency standards in the 'Three Rs' before a student can graduate high school)," he said. "But a lot of them are things I don't think anyone knows about."

For example, there's the requirement that "school hours be posted at every entrance to every school and grounds." Or that a snakebite kit be taken on field trips "into an area which is commonly known to be infested by poisonous snakes."

Or that all textbooks and other instructional materials can only be used for six years. And that the materials portray the wise use of natural resources, thrift, the cultural and racial diversity of our society and all its ethnic and racial groups.

Wilsdon is baffled by requirements like the one banning a residency requirement for graduation since there is a residency requirement to attend school.

And he wondered if a prohibition against diplomas "bearing stigmatizing references to the intellectual or mental capacity of the pupil" means you can't say the student graduated last in his class.

AT THE BOARD meeting, Trustee Frances Gaver was stumped by the requirement to portray thrift.

"Now how are we going to explain the conduct of the federal government?" she asked, drawing a round of laughter.

High school principal Dan Stevenson confessed that he didn't know if the school had a snakebite kit. "Though," he said, "we don't have a field trip budget, so we might be safe."

Miss Swain assigned to planning post

Sandy Swain was appointed vice-chairman of the Carmel Planning Commission last week by the commission chairman, Robert Stephenson.

The vacancy occurred when Commissioner Leslie Gross was appointed to the Carmel City Council on Sept. 5.

Miss Swain was appointed to the commission in September 1977 by Mayor Gunnar Norberg. She replaced Paul Sletton, who resigned from the commission.

Miss Swain will serve as vice-chairman for the duration of her term. It is scheduled to expire in May.

Club installs Klaumann as president

Former Carmel Police Chief Clyde R. Klaumann was installed as president of the Carmel Mission Kiwanis Club at ceremonies Friday at the Holiday Inn in Carmel.

Klaumann, the third president of the fledgling club, was installed by Kiwanis Lt. Gov. Fred Fozounmayeh.

Other officers installed were Michael P. Milligan, president-elect; Dr. Ralph E. Retherford, vice president; Milton W. Moore, treasurer; and Charles L. Pugh, secretary.

Directors are James D. Long, Clyde H. Tuomela, Carl C. Schmuck, Lew E. McCreery, Carl A. Culbert, Richard A. Wecker and Peter J. Chmarney.

The club meets at the Carmel Holiday Inn Tuesdays at 7:30 a.m.

FOURTH AND FIFTH grade pupils at Carmel River School pensively await the start of an unusual test to diagnose faults in their composition skills. They were given an unfinished story and told to complete it in their own words. The test reader, Norma Walch, said after reading the students' conclusions, "I was pleasantly surprised. Overall, they did very well." (Michael Stang photo)

River School youngsters show book critic-reader they can write English

IF JOHNNY can't read, most experts conclude that Johnny cannot write either. Inductive logic put in reverse, that must mean that fourth and fifth graders at Carmel River School are reading.

About 160 of the youngsters took an unusual test in composition last week. Most in the group did well.

"I was pleasantly surprised," said Norma Walch, a special aide hired to read the compositions. She is a book reviewer and the wife of Robert Walch, chairman of the English department at Carmel High School.

"Overall, they did very well. We tested for sentence structure, punctuation and grammar. The most common errors involved spelling," Mrs. Walch said.

What is unusual about the test is that it requires a positive response from the students, said Vance Frazier, the school principal. In most composition testing, he said, the youngsters are asked to identify errors deliberately placed in a prepared text. But the River School composition test requires them to "start from scratch," said Frazier.

Pointing to the stack of compositions, Mrs. Walch said, "They can write and that would reason that they are reading. There's a relationship between reading the written word and writing it."

Each pupil was given a prepared story that had a beginning but no end. The scenario was this: They were moving to a farm and a friend was giving them a newcomer's tour of the countryside. The guide's last line was, "Have you heard about the stange things that have happened at your farm?" Each student was asked to write about what he saw. Most of the conclusions were about a page long.

"It's kind of unusual," Mrs. Walch said of the results. "The boys saw space things—flying saucers and aliens and the like—given Star Wars. The girls, however, were a bit more mystery-oriented—ghosts and haunted houses."

The results will be used by teachers on an individual basis to emphasize skills some students lack. The test will be given again in June to determine if the students have improved.

Phil S. Gibson, 90, retired chief justice, to be honored Sunday

"WHY PICK ME? There's so many others who are younger."

That was Phil S. Gibson's first reaction to the news he had been selected the 1978 recipient of the Ralph Atkinson Civil Liberties Award, according to Richard Criley. The annual award is given by the Monterey chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. Criley is its chairman.

Gibson, now 90 and retired in Carmel, will receive the award Sunday afternoon. Before retiring in 1964, Gibson spent 24 years as chief justice of the California Supreme Court. Many of his landmark decisions are held in high regard by civil libertarians.

In 1952, he wrote the majority opinion that struck down the state Alien Land Law which prohibited Japanese aliens from owning property. He also wrote majority opinions on civil rights cases such as the one that barred labor unions from precluding blacks from full membership.

Most recently, his opinion on Jackson vs. Pasadena City School District, handed down shortly before his retirement, has been used as the foundation for court-order school desegregation in Los Angeles and other major cities.

The ruling struck down gerrymandering school attendance areas so some schools would be predominantly white while others would be predominantly black.

The guest speaker at Sunday's award ceremony will be Rose Bird, chief justice of the state Supreme Court. She is scheduled to deliver a tribute to his years on the bench. Francis Heisler, the civil rights attorney from Carmel, will present the honor. He received it last year.

Reservations can be obtained by phoning 624-7562. Admission is $12.50. The event will be in the Hunt Club at the Monterey County Fairgrounds starting at 1:30 p.m.

WILLY LOMAN (Bob Lotz) is forced to face the failure of his life in Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," to be presented Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 6-8, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

Carmel group to present 'Death of a Salesman'

Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman will be presented Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 6-8, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. each evening.

Bob Lotz of Monterey will portray Willy Loman, the tired salesman whose life seems to be a failure when he reaches 60, loses his job and seems unable to control his emotional relationships with his wife and two sons. Lotz has been an actor for 35 years, with television roles on The FBI, The Psychiatrist, Thumb-Tripping, Night Song and Space Patrol. He appeared in The Sunshine Boys at the Studio Theatre in Carmel and Front Page at the Wharf Theatre.

Rosemary Garrison plays his wife; sons Biff and Happy are played by Joseph P. Patrick III and John McAbery. Thomas R. Sanchez is Bernard; Ellin Prather portrays the Woman. Others in the cast are Jeff Hudelson, Chick Adamick, Skip Sherman, Steven Alarid, Gail Palmes and Julia Shumelda.

The production is directed by John H. Pascale of Carmel who appeared recently as Douglas in Henry IV, Part 1 at the Forest Theater. He directed Oh Dad, Poor Dad at Monterey Peninsula College last spring. Pascale and Bruce Wedlake are the producers of the play.

Set designer is Dyke Garrison; costumes are by Carol Hovick.

Death of a Salesman was first performed on Feb. 10, 1949, at the Morosco Theatre in New York. Miller won the New York Drama Critics' Award and the Pulitzer Price for drama for Salesman.

Advance tickets, at $4.50, are available at the Record Cove, 421 Alvarado, Monterey; the Thunderbird Bookshop in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel; the Monterey Box Office in Sun Stereo, Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey; the Forge in the Forest and General Store, Junipero and Fifth, Carmel; and Bookworks, Country Club Gate Shopping Center, Pacific Grove. Tickets will be $5.50 at the door. Senior citizen tickets will be $3.50.

A weekend of racing action in Monterey Grand Prix

Corvettes, Porsches and two Jaguar XJs will compete for a $20,000 purse, championship points and manufacturers points in the Trans-Am race, one of six races in the Shasta Monterey Grand Prix Friday-Sunday, Oct. 6-8, at Laguna Seca Raceway, 10 miles east of Monterey on Highway 68.

Other races to be run at Laguna Seca will be the Citicorp Can-Am Challenge, the Rabbit Bilstein Cup, Formula Ford, Formula Vee and F, G, H Production.

Bob Tullius, the 1977 and 1978 Trans-Am Category I champion, and Brian Fuerstenau, chief developmental engineer for Group 44's Jaguars, will lead British Leyland's drive to capture the title in the first Trans-Am races at Laguna Seca in eight years.

Among those competing with the Tullius and Fuerstenau Jaguar team will be 21 Corvette drivers, including Greg Pickett, Babe Headly, Gary Carlen, Lew Larimer and Frank Joyce.

Porsches entered in the race will be driven by Monte Shelton, SCCA Northern Pacific Division Champion; Hal Shaw, fourth overall in 1977 Trans-Am; and Gary Nylander. Others entered in the race include Milt Minter in a Firebird and Ray Woods in a turbo Monza.

Trans-Am Category I cars are mass-produced sports cars, resembling showroom cars but permitted some modifications. Category II cars, slightly more exotic, are special automobiles based on production-built vehicles, but with wider wheels, flaired fenders, wings in back and airdams in front.

Englishman Brian Redman returns to Can-Am racing and Laguna Seca for the Citicorp Can-Am Challenge in his Haas/Hall Citicorp Lola and Elliott Forbes-Robinson will drive the Budweiser Racing Team's Spyder Can-Am Car, in which he has won two races, one at Charlotte and the other at Trois-Rivieres. Others competing for the $50,000 Can-Am purse will include George Follmer, Warwick Brown, Jean Pierre Jarier, Al Holbert and Vern Schuppan.

Can-Am cars are single and two-seat sports cars powered by five-liter stock blocks, two-liter and three-liter racing engines, with bodies built exclusively for closed-circuit racing.

Other races will be run by Volkswagen Rabbits just as they come off the showroom floor with no modifications beyond approved rollbars and fire extinguishers; Formula Fords, which are Ford Cortinas, Capris, and Pintos with limited modifications; Formula Vees, which are racing cars based on 1200cc Volkswagen components with VW steering, gear box, suspension and wheels; and F, G, H Production, which are mass produced sports cars with some modifications for safety and parts life.

Advance tickets are $3 Friday, $4 Saturday, $9 Sunday and $11 for a three-day ticket. Gate prices will be $3 Friday, $5 Saturday, $10 Sunday and $13 for a three-day ticket. Special three-day tickets for students and military personnel will be $8 in advance or at the gate. Additional tickets, at $6, are necessary for admission to the paddock on Saturday and Sunday. Grandstands tickets will be $3 Saturday and Sunday.

Advance tickets are available at the Macy's ticket agency, Del Monte Center, Monterey; the BASS outlet in Pacific Stereo, 552 Fremont, Monterey; the Ticketron outlet in Roos-Atkins, Del Monte Center; and at the offices of the Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula, Fairgrounds Travelodge, Monterey.

Legendary Pete Seeger to give concert in Monterey

Legendary folk musician Pete Seeger will present a concert Wednesday, Oct. 11, at the Monterey Conference Center Ballroom, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

Seeger has been singing the music of America, often in the company of such stars as Woody Guthrie, Doc Watson, Huddie Ledbetter, Bob Dylan and Arlo Guthrie, since he set out on the road in 1938 to try his hand in the fields of art and journalism and found himself among the jobless masses.

His parents were both professional musicians who taught at Juilliard School of Music, but Seeger was uninterested in classical music, preferring to play the banjo and ukelele in the high school jazz band. In 1935, when he was 16, his father took him to a square dance festival in Asheville, N.C., where he fell in love with the old-fashioned five-string banjo, an instrument developed from a gourd that probably arrived on a ship carrying slaves from Africa.

"I like the rhythms," he reminisced. "I like the melodies, time-tested by generations of singers. Above all, I like the words.

"Compared to the trivialities of most popular songs, the words of these songs had all the meat of human life in them. They sang of heroes, outlaws, murderers, fools. They weren't afraid of being tragic instead of just sentimental . . . so in 1935 I tried learning some of this music . . . I'm still learning."

In 1935, he spent a year listening to recordings in the Archives of American Folk Music of the Library of Congress with Alan Lomax, then went back on the road again. After spending the war years in the armed forces, he joined the Almanacs, then helped form the Weavers, both noted folk groups.

He has recorded more than 30 albums, of which his most recent releases are Banks of Marble on Folkways Records and Pete Seeger and Arlo Guthrie Together in Concert on Warner Bros.

He has produced a number of short films and a television series entitled Rainbow Guest, taped in 1965 and 1966.

In 1948, he mimeographed 100 copies of How to Play the Five-String Banjo, which now sells about 18,000 copies a year. He also wrote The Folksingers Guitar Guide (with Jerry Silverman), Henscratches and Flyspecks: Or How to Read Melodies from Songbooks in Twelve Confusing Lessons and The Incompleat Folksinger.

Advance tickets, at $5.50, are available at the Monterey Box Office in Sun Stereo, Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey; at the BASS outlet at Pacific Stereo, 552 Fremont, Monterey; and the Ticketron outlet in Roos-Atkins, Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey.

Tickets will be $6.50 on the day of the concert.

Second act of 'Here's Entertainment' contains several enjoyable numbers

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

HERE'S ENTERTAINMENT! is not a very appropriate name for the current show at the Theatre in the Barnyard. Here's Tedium! would be more accurate, or perhaps Here's Embarrassment! Apparently an attempt to keep the theatre open without the effort of mounting a full-scale production, it is an ill-conceived and under-rehearsed hodgepodge of musical numbers interspersed with rambling monolog.

A few segments are moderately well performed, which makes them stand out in high relief from the rest. Jonathan Anderson's Scarecrow dance number, If I only Had a Brain, from The Wizard of Oz, is well choreographed and amusing. It is the only thing that saves the first half of the show from being a complete loss. The act opens with an unfunny little parody of Chorus Line, from which Sandi Tinker breaks into Let's Do It for no discernible reason. Neither she nor the audience was quite warmed up for it, although she proved later to have a warm, pleasant voice. The rest of the act progresses slowly through excerpts from The Music Man, featuring Miss Tinker and Bruce Tuthill; a medley of songs from the thirties and forties; scenes from Annie, with Robin Pease in the title role and C. J. McArthur as the mother; and a disappointing group of songs from Bruce Tuthill, who addresses the audience with a somewhat sullen hostility and proceeds to deliver The Impossible Dream and the Carousel Soliloquy much less well than he is capable of. Perhaps performing the same material several times a week for the past year has dulled his ability to respond to it emotionally. As he fumbled with the microphone, the rouge on his cheeks reminding one uncomfortably of the last days of Gustave Aschenbach, and asked the audience for suggestions, surely only charity kept everyone from making the obvious one.

The second act is a considerable improvement over the first, with some enjoyable songs from the fifties and similar ones from Grease. Particularly well done are Duke of Earl, with Kenneth Boutelle as the hair combing lead and Jonathan Anderson and Tom Finklang as stylized young hoods behind him, and Freddy My Love, sung with delightful animation by Diane Brussel. After an Elvis imitation by Bruce Tuthill, a lackluster group of selections from Li'l Abner and a sometimes amusing comic routine by Lee Garland, Miss Brussel does another fine job with the very different Nothing, from Chorus Line. The ensemble then moves into a finale, also from Chorus Line. The choreography, by Gloria Elber, is also better in this act than the first.

Throughout the evening, the timing of individual numbers and the flow from one to the next are marred by lack of coordination with the piano, which is particularly odd since the accompanist, Lee Garland, also "directed and created" the show. Greg Granoff, who played for several of the numbers without any previous rehearsal, did surprisingly well. It may be that some intensive rehearsal will make this a show worth seeing.

The lighting by Ross Brown and Pat Harrop is more competently and professionally done than most of the singing and dancing.

Unless better judgment prevails, Here's Entertainment! will play Thursday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the Theatre in the Barnyard, Carmel.

Theater review

Party Plans

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

When my friend Nielson Locke was here in Carmel he showed us how to have wine and cheese parties on the patio. We would start off with the very best wines which Niels had the know-how to select, and the hors d'oeuvres were made by my Carmel women friends.

Chive Cheese Dip: Soften some Philadelphia cream cheese at room temperature with half and half milk. Add chopped slivered white almonds, chopped pimiento-stuffed olives, salt to taste and, of course, chopped chives, your own or the defrosted frozen kind.

From a charming booklet published in Tokyo and called simply Hors d'Oeuvres from Embassy Kitchens come the following recipes:

Crabmeat Delight: This is a delicious cold dip, but equally good piled high on toast rounds and heated in a 400 F. oven. Marinate one can of crabmeat in fresh lime juice for at least an hour. Add minced onion, mayonnaise, mashed garlic and salt.

Cheese Wafers: Combine 1/2 pound grated cheddar cheese with one stick butter, a speck of salt and pepper. Cream well and add 1½ cups sifted flour. Form into roll about an inch in diameter and wrap in waxed paper. Chill for two hours, then slice into thin wafers and bake in moderate oven for about 12 minutes. The cheese rounds may be kept in the refrigerator and baked when needed.

Tuna Puffs: Saute a medium onion or 1 bunch green onions in a little butter. Add an undiluted can of cream of mushroom soup to make a cream sauce. Then add a can of the very best white tuna packed in water. Make a pancake batter from a mix. Form balls and roll in batter. Fry for a few minutes in deep fry pan. If you do not fry them too long, they may be made several hours in advance and reheated in a 400 F. oven. They must be served hot.

Pine Needles

Navy Fire Technician Third Class Jerry D. Gonzalez, son of Ramon E. Gonzalez of Carmel, was recently promoted to his present rank after graduation from Fire Control Technician School.

A sailor since November, he took part in a 23-week course at the Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, Ill., where he received instruction on the electronic weapons systems installed aboard U.S. warships.

Wendy Westsmith of Carmel was among 17 women to be inducted as a new member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority at Fresno State University. The sorority stresses academic achievement and campus and community involvement among its members.

William J. Boone of Carmel Valley was elected president of the Monterey Community School of Music at a recent meeting of the board of directors. He fills the office vacated by Frances Gaver, a trustee on the Carmel school board, who resigned but will remain an active member of the board.

Boone, a Valley resident for 10 years, heads a local optical business. His wife, Laurie, is headmistress at All Saints' Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley. They have four children.

Marcia Elinor Connelly was born at Community Hospital on Sept. 26 to Barry and Virginia Connelly of Carmel.

The 6-pound, 6-ounce girl has dark hair, dark eyes and "looks like me," said Barry when describing the new family addition.

Marcia was named after her maternal grandmother, Marcia Albiol, who recently moved to Carmel from Upland in Southern California. Barry added that Mrs. Albiol, now a grandmother, has a label she isn't always pleased with—"Big Marcia."

Besides Marcia Elinor, there are two other children in the family—Matt, 3, and Carol, 18 months.

Mrs. Verle D. Bogue of Pebble Beach has donated $1,000 to the Carmel school district for athletic equipment. Her gift came through the Harry H. Wolf Family Foundation.

The Carmel High School choir also was a recipient of a $300 gift from Stefan and Sue Petroff and $250 from Bill and Bonnie McIninch, all of Pebble Beach.

ATTORNEY Laurence P. Horan of Carmel has been elected to the alumni council of the California Alumni Association, a 70,000-member organization of UC Berkeley.

President of the Monterey law firm of Horan, Lloyd and Karachale, Horan also is trustee and vice chairman of the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies.

Horan and his wife, Jean, have four children.

"OPIUM" TRAFFIC has been found in Carmel, but in this case it is designer Yves St. Laurent's new perfume not the illegal poppy by-product.

Banned in the U.S. and Australia until recently because of its suggestive name, Opium is the biggest scent to hit the market since Chanel No. 5, according to Trudy Simis-Williams, a Carmel resident and product representative at I. Magnin.

The sales volume indicates that Carmel residents are finding the new perfume addicting. In a five-day period since being introduced Sept. 23 at I. Magnin in Carmel, more than $500 worth of the liquid was sold.

The price, however, may not be as addicting as the rich spicy scent—$100 an ounce.

Louise A. Farrier of Carmel was among 1,663 students who have earned academic credits this year by taking the California State University and Colleges equivalency examination in chemistry.

The Santa Catalina High School graduate passed at a level equal to a typical college student taking regular courses in chemistry.

Adam Beck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Beck of Carmel, finished sixth in the California State Motocross Championships in Hayward on Sept. 23.

The 14-year-old York School student "should have been fourth," his father said, but someone fouled Adam on the last turn of the half-mile course causing him to fall.

After three preliminary races with 50 riders, Adam rode in the 14-year-old novice class with five others.

Though he has been racing for only four months, he has been consistently finishing ahead of more experienced riders, his father said.

Part of the credit for his success could be attributed to his family. His father helps him on bike mechanics and his mother, Anna, and his sister, Katie, provide the cheering section.

FIRST PLACE in the Carmel Business Association prize drawing Saturday went to Bruce Kendall, manager of Carmel Builders Supply. Kendall won a trip for two to the MGM Grand Hotel in Reno, Nev., with accommodations and shows for a weekend included. Second prize of a $100 gift certificate at association members' went to Carmella Cardinale of the Village Shoe Tree and the $50 gift certificate to Arne and Tov Poulsen of the Royal Danish Bakery. Proceeds from the contest go to pay off legal fees of the association.

Live music, dance at Greenpeace benefit

Live music and ethnic dance performances will be presented Friday and Saturday, Oct. 6-7, noon-midnight, at the mall of Carmel Center, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, as a benefit for Greenpeace of Monterey Bay and the Artists Performer Series. Most performances are free.

ALL THE THRILLS and spills of big-time racing but the car, a Lola owned by Chuck August of Carmel, is only 18 inches long. About 80 of the one-eighth scale gas-powered radio-controlled racing cars from California, Nevada and Arizona are entered in the Golden State Classic races Friday-Sunday, Oct. 6-8, at Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey.

Miniature cars entered in race in Monterey

While the real racing cars are whizzing around the track at Laguna Seca Raceway this weekend, 80 miniature car racing enthusiasts will compete for honors in the Golden State Classic Friday-Sunday, Oct. 6-8, at Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey. Spectators are welcome to attend; there is no admission charge.

The one-eighth scale gas-powered racing cars, about 18 inches long, are radio controlled and will go up to 60 miles per hour. The little racers run on a 40 per cent nitro-methane gasoline and have pressurized fuel systems, disc brakes and tuned exhausts. Each car costs about $500 and is built from a kit.

The race course is a road course set up with wooden barriers on an asphalt parking lot.

Practice rounds are scheduled from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, and the race heats are scheduled from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, with finals scheduled all day Sunday.

For more information, phone 625-2637.

Annual Hole-in-One Contest Sat., Sun. in Pacific Grove

More than $3,500 in donated prizes from local merchants will be awarded during the 16th annual Hole-in-One Contest Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 7-8, at the Pacific Grove Golf Links 14th green, Jewell and Briggs, Pacific Grove. The contest, which will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day, is sponsored by the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce.

Prizes, to be awarded every hour, include an original Dan Searle "Good Grief" golf ashtray, a 31 diamond heart-shaped pendant, seascape oil paintings, round-trip airfare for two to Lake Tahoe, golf equipment, Crosby booster badges, green fees, flight and garment bags, dinners for two, a lady's golf bag carrier, walnut domino set, Johnny Carson pajamas, a case of wine, bottles of liquor, gift certificates and many other prizes. The grand prize is a complete set of Pinseeker clubs.

A special senior citizens award, an annual membership at the golf links with unlimited golf play for one year, will be awarded to a person 65 or over.

The contest will be conducted on seven tee pads, including an Expressway Lane for those who want to enter the contest and then continue their golf game.

Advance tickets, at $1 for four shots, are available at the Pacific Grove Municipal Golf Links and the Pacific Grove Chamber office, Forest and Central, Pacific Grove. Tickets will be $1 for three shots on the days of the contest.

British comedies to be shown at MPC Film Gallery Friday

British comedians Peter Sellers and Terry-Thomas star in a double bill of comedies to be screened at the Monterey Peninsula College Film Gallery, Friday, Oct. 6, at the MPC Music Hall, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. The program begins at 8 p.m.

Sellers is featured in Two Way Stretch, a spoof of prison life in which he and his cellmates escape from jail for just one night to commit an outrageously funny robbery. The scenes of prison life are handled in a typically British fashion, making the jail seem like a comfortable boarding house peopled by eccentrics. After their escape, the prisoners are confronted with having to break back into the jail so they can return to their cells and establish their alibi. The cast includes Bernard Cribbins, Lionel Jeffries and Wilfrid Hyde-White.

Terry-Thomas, Billie Whitelaw and Hattie Jacques star in Make Mine Mink. As guests in a slightly run down but elegant mansion, the trio takes off on a robbery spree with valuable furs as their specialty. The stolen goods are converted to cash which is, in Robin Hood fashion, given to the group's favorite charity.

Admission is $2; Gold Card holders will be admitted for $1.

For more information, phone 373-5522.

'Brigadoon' Tues. at Sunset

Brigadoon, the classic Lerner and Loewe musical about two American hunters lost in the Scottish Highlands who stumble onto a magical village, will be screened Tuesday, Oct. 10, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The program begins at 8 p.m.

Gene Kelly, Van Johnson, Cyd Charisse, Elaine Stewart and Barry Jones star in the story of the magical village of Brigadoon which comes alive only once every 100 years. The 1954 production was directed by Vincente Minnelli.

Admission is $2. Season tickets, which include eight other musical films to be shown the second Tuesday of each month through June, are still available for $10.

Music Society season passes still available

Season subscriptions for the 52nd Carmel Music Society season will remain available until the first concert Friday, Oct. 20, which will feature Korean violinist Kyung-Wha Chung.

Other concerts in the series will be presented by the Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra Sunday, Jan. 21; pianist Jean-Phillippe Collard Friday, Feb. 16; soprano Leona Mitchell Wednesday, March 28; and Neil Rutman, winner of the Carmel Music Society's Second Annual Young California Artist competition Thursday, May 31.

Season tickets are $30, $26 and $22.

For tickets or more information, phone 624-2085.

Bronstein reflects artistry of Claudio Arrau

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

PROBABLY THE most important professional asset to the career of Chile-born pianist Ena Bronstein was her study with Claudio Arrau, the Chilean who is one of the finest pianists in the world today. And the influence of Arrau is obvious in the artistry of Miss Bronstein who returned to the Peninsula for a solo concert Sunday night at Sunset Theatre. She demonstrated once again her marvelous command of the keyboard, even if the collective impact of her recital was a bit softer than that of her performance at Monterey Peninsula College last year.

Music Corner

Three works comprised the Sunday program—the Mozart Sonata in a minor, K. 310, Pour le piano by Debussy and the Brahms Sonata in f minor, Op. 5.

The Sonata in a minor is one of Mozart's most distinctive and after a moment of "set" Miss Bronstein launched a no-nonsense and articulate reading. The opening allegro was patrician, but red-blooded. The andante cantabile reflects as much of the Mozart of the theater as of the suggested title and the playing was clear and expressive. The presto captured the same propulsion of the first movement.

IN THE DEBUSSY, not only was this breezy and charming work given a refreshing and illuminated presentation, but Miss Bronstein added considerably of herself. It was a different approach that shed unusual light on the character of the three movements. For example, the prelude had an almost Rachmaninoffian Russian quality to it. The ancient romance of the Sarabande was pungent and the movement's inner voices were always very lucid and important. Miss Bronstein's approach to the toccata was distinctively non-percussive, unlike the playing of this movement by many French pianists. Instead, there was a softness and flowing legato which proved very effective and nonetheless articulate.

The Brahms Sonata in f minor was a product of the composer's late teens and among the handful of pieces that so impressed Schumann that the latter wrote a newspaper article praising this budding young talent. And for all the "Schumanism" of it, this sonata has the clear stamp of an original musical mind. For that matter this work, which has been out of vogue for a long time, provides a most interesting glimpse of the young Brahms. Except for the inclusion of an intermezzo as the fourth movement, the work follows the common form of a solo sonata at that time.

MISS BRONSTEIN gave the piece a luminescent presentation, though one lacking the power and authority one might expect from the likes of Sviatoslav Richter. Her playing was probably, therefore, more like the way it was heard by Schumann. She was more communicatively effective in the slower movements. The opening allegro, where Schumann is the most in evidence, was grand but in a youthful and impulsive manner. The andante was, for me, the high point of the evening. Not only is this unmistakably Brahms, which is an amazing feat for a 19-year-old, but Miss Bronstein brought the full measure of poignant expression to its ingenuous pathos. The music was surprisingly sophisticated, the playing clear and sensitive, the total effect enchanting. The scherzo, in 3/4 time, was again strongly Brahmsian.

A surprising moment in the intermezzo was the motto of Rachmaninoff's famous Prelude in c sharp minor. Miss Bronstein tended to hold down the suggested full expansion of the movement. The finale is given to a certain amount of bravura, ending with an exciting keyboard display. It also is invested with a rich and charming song subject. The "song" was exquisitely played, though the drama of the bravura passages was held to understatement simply because its power was contained.

One of the Chopin etudes was given as an encore and elicited a standing ovation by part of the house, a gesture that seemed strangely inappropriate since the applause accorded the rest of the program seemed restrained. Not that the encore was not exciting, but its demands were certainly not in proportion to the Brahms sonata, at least.

California's best wines judged at Los Angeles County Fair

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

IN 1935 the Los Angeles County Fair, the largest in the nation, introduced wine judging with 12 classes of wines. This year, the 40th (with some wartime interruptions), there were 122 classes of dessert wines and brandies, champagne and sparkling wines, red and white table wines, aperitifs, natural fruit wines, miscellaneous wines and wines in bulk. A record 96 California wineries submitted 949 wines.

The wine connoisseur

Twenty-two judges evaluated those wines over a three-day period, diligently sniffing, tasting and spitting from 7 a.m. until 3:30 p.m., with no food or luncheon breaks to keep their palates impeccably honed to the task at hand. Seventy-five gold medals were given, 93 silver, 93 bronze and honorable mention to 70 entries. Since the founding of the wine judging by the late Harold Richardson, and continued since 1967 by attorney Nathan Chroman of Beverly Hills, the awards have had a single goal, specifically to encourage and stimulate the improvement of quality in California wines.

There is not the slightest taint of commercialism in the selection of the judges. None has any connection with a winery. A point system is not used in the blind-tasting judgment. Separately seated tasters determine, as objectively as possible, a quality ranking, and make award recommendations, then caucus for final determination for gold, silver, bronze or honorable mention distinctions.

THE MOST general criticism of the fair's net results comes from frustrated consumers unable to obtain some of the gold medal-winning wines at their local emporiums. Acid critics complain that small entries win big prizes, but there are also gold medals given to large gallonage entries. It's the name of the game. We go back to the purpose of the competition, as stated earlier—to stimulate constant improvement.

This year's Late Harvest Johannisberg Riesling entries, from the panel on which I served, received four highly deserved gold medals, one bronze and one honorable mention from the 17 participating exhibits. We all agreed that, as a class, the winners exceeded the merits of a former grand prize sweepstakes winner of a few years back. Our good California winemakers had reached a new plateau of excellence in their winemaking techniques in this demanding skill.

The same was true in the vinification of Chardonnay, Gewurztraminer and, most notably, with Emerald Riesling, the California hybrid vine.

Two hundred case lots of gold medal-winning wines cannot afford much in the way of national distribution for sure. But the very rare prizes of many European estates, in world demand, have wrestled with this problem for centuries. Connoisseurs accept the fact that the supply of Romanee-Conti is limited. Wine merchants and restaurateurs have badgered the distributors of Montrachet Laguiche, a celebrated White Burgundy of Chardonnay grapes, for a case or two as an allotment. Today, there are a half-dozen California 100 per cent Chardonnay wines, at half the price or less, than this regal French wine, deserving not only equal ranking but equal consideration as rare wine.

AT THE FAIR this year, we accorded three gold medals, four silver, three bronze and two honorable mentions to California Chardonnay. Our panel also made note of the great improvement of the class of 36 entries.

You should have no problem obtaining cellar supplies, right now, of one of the gold medal winners, the 1977 Sonoma Vineyards Chardonnay, River West Vineyard, produced by winemaker Rod Strong. The winning entry came from an 8,000-case supply. Strong also won a gold medal for his 1974 Sonoma Vineyards Estate-Grown Pinot Noir, from a 2,000-case supply.

For the first time in several years, the judges unanimously awarded the "Best of Fair" sweepstakes Grand Prize to one wine, from the tiny Smothers winery of Vine Hill Wines Inc., owned by comedian Dick Smothers, for a 1977 Gewurztraminer, of Late Harvest style. It was made by biochemist Leo McCloskey from Alexander Valley grapes, a 500-gallon lot, roughly 200 cases, at the Santa Cruz hillside winery.

There'll be some intensive bidding by wine merchants for a share of this candy-sweet dessert wine, which our panel placed before the full complement of judges for that big prize. Bill Gibbs, Smothers' man-in-charge for distribution, tells us that he'll save some for Chicago, Denver, New Orleans and New York beyond select wine shops of California. At $7.50 per bottle, like all these other winners, it's proof again that the best wine buys in America come from California wineries.

If you'd like a copy of all the winners at the Los Angeles County Fair Judging for 1978, complete with a text outlining the judging criteria, send $1 with your request to: Agnes Ortega, Los Angeles County Fair Assn., P.O. Box 2250, Pomona, Calif. 91766.

Artists gather monthly to discuss problems

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

SOMETHING IS HAPPENING in the art world that is creating concern. It "blasted off" early in the '70s with the auction sale of Rembrandt's Aristotle Contemplating the Bust of Homer for $3.4 million, gathered momentum with the sale of a Velasquez portrait for $5 million, soon after a Jackson Pollack for $2 million, and now seems to be heading for "outer space" with the sale of Caleb Bingham's The Jolly Flatboatmen for $980,000.

Hilton Kramer, a critic for the New York Times, said "the whole thing has gotten out of hand." He asked: "After Bingham, who'll be the next candidate for stardom? In another generation or another era, the money spent on art ceases to be a serious factor in its consideration, perhaps even a comical detail, in the career of the object. It is important to remember that comic perspective."

Unfortunately, while these sales at tremendous prices are taking place, the majority of the contemporary artists whose work in the next decade or two may be the focus for similar speculative buying are struggling to make ends meet.

This is one of the many topics that the Artist's Forum addresses itself to at its regular last-Friday-of-the-month meetings at Sunset Center in the Chapman Room. The group, under the direction of Sam Colburn, has been meeting at Sunset Center since November 1977. Discussions have covered the many problems that confront an artist. Plan to attend one of these meetings and exchange opinions and ideas with other artists. The time is 7:30 p.m.

DEATH OF A SALESMAN is one of Arthur Miller's most interesting studies of the tragic hero. Willie Loman, the traveling salesman, has had many fine interpretations starting with Lee J. Cobb, who originated the role for the Broadway production and then repeated it in the filmed version of the play.

Bob Lotz will bring this role to life again in a production of Death of a Salesman to be presented at Sunset Theatre on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 8:30 p.m. Joining him are Rosemary Garrison, who just returned from her studies at ACT, appearing as Willie's wife; Linda and Jeff Hudelson, who will be making his last Peninsula appearance before leaving for Steamboat Springs, Colo., where he will do a season of plays for Richard Geer. Tickets are $4.50 in advance and $3.50 for senior citizens. Tickets are available at Sun Records in Salinas, the Thunderbird Bookstore at the Barnyard and at the Forge in the Forest in Carmel. Tickets will be available at the box office for $5.50.

THE MUSICAL THEATER Film Festival continues with the Lerner-Loewe filmed version of Brigadoon on Tuesday in Sunset Theatre at 8 p.m. This musical concerns two American hunters, played by Gene Kelly and Van Johnson, who stumble into a magical village in the Scottish Highlands that comes alive only once every 100 years. There Kelly falls in love with the lithe Cyd Charisse, but is convinced by Johnson to return to civilization before the day ends. Kelly lives to regret his decision and returns to the spot to wish the village back into existence. Marvelously stylized sets and dancing by Kelly and Charisse are highlights of this fanciful musical. Tickets are available at the door; however, you still can buy a series ticket and save some money. Call the director's office, 624-3996, for more information.

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Film Society meeting in the Leonard Carpenter Hall continues to grow in popularity with its choice of art films. This week the Peruvian film The Green Wall, which has won best-film awards in festivals in Chicago, Panama, and Barcelona, will be shown along with Salto, a Polish film directed by Tadeusz Konwicki. A surrealistic film in the tradition of Cocteau, it is a good film to see if one is unfamiliar with the surrealistic traditions of Polish films. The films will be shown Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $3.50 for non-members.

SUBSCRIPTION TICKETS for the Carmel Festival of Dance are still available. Besides a savings of $3, this will ensure you good seats for all the attractions in this year's series. After Tuesday, single tickets will go on sale. Call the director's office for more information.

GOVERNMENT MUST weigh all of its programs carefully and dismiss none of them as cavalierly as the arts have been in California. A society that considers it a grill to nourish its soul is in deep trouble."

PETE SEEGER, beloved by many as America's troubador, will present a concert Wednesday, Oct. 11, at the Monterey Conference Center Ballroom, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

Sierra Club will survey results of summer trail-building project

Sierra Club members and other interested persons will inspect a new trail built by members of the club during the summer in the Forest of Nisene Marks during a hike scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 8.

The six-mile loop trip has an overall elevation gain of about 600 feet and goes up the Loma Prieta Lumber Co. Railroad grade trail to Hoffman Camp and then along the new trail down to China Camp on Bridge Creek for lunch. After lunch, the hikers will follow the newly improved Bridge Creek trail back to the cars.

Bring food, $2 carpool fee, water and good walking shoes and meet at the World Savings and Loan parking lot, Del Monte Center, Monterey, at 8:30 a.m. for the 45-minute drive to Aptos. Hikers may also meet the group at the entrance to the park just across the railroad tracks in Aptos at 9:30 a.m. For more information, phone Merrill Jones, 624-3052 evenings.

A six-mile hike from one side of Jacks Peak to the other is planned Saturday, Oct. 7. The hike involves a 600-foot elevation gain.

Bring hiking boots, water and lunch and meet at 8:15 a.m. at the Cinema 70 parking lot, Del Monte Shopping Center, for carpool and shuttle. For more information, phone leader Marion Chilson, 624-3510.

AAUW plans rummage sale Saturday

The Monterey Peninsula branch of the American Association of University Women will present the 29th annual Dollars for Scholars Rummage Sale Saturday, Oct. 7, at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden Roads, Monterey. Hours are 9 a.m.-3 p.m.

New and used items for sale will include books, plants and gardening supplies, clothing, furniture, toys, jewelry, arts and crafts, linens, housewares and accessories.

A snack bar will serve sandwiches, homemade desserts and beverages.

Proceeds from the sale will be used for graduate fellowships for women, a student emergency fund at Monterey Peninsula College and various community service projects.

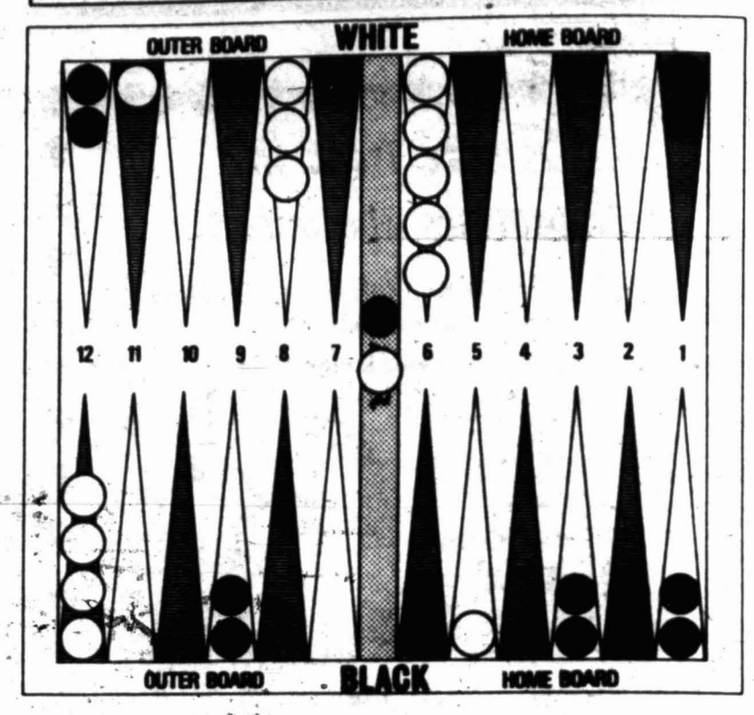
Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF



Black rolls 4-3. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Black seems to have a perfectly natural move available—enter with the 4 and secure the White 4-point with the 3. That is perfectly safe and leaves Black way ahead in the race with an anchor in the White home board.

Nine times out of 10, that would be enough to win the game. After all, White has no positional game besides being far behind.

There is only one way that White can get back into the game. That is by securing the Black 5-point, then building his home board and later getting a shot at a Black blot. And if Black plays safe now, he will be giving White the opportunity to do just that.

Black should not be thinking of safety first. This is the time for aggressive backgammon, for the opportunity to gammon White is real. Black should go all out for the kill.

I would enter with the 3 and hit the White blot on the Black 5-point with the 4. That puts a second White man on the bar, and with White facing a 4-point Black home board, that is not a position he can relish. If White does not come in and hit, Black has a good chance to cover his 5-point—to be exact, 19 combinations will make the 5-point. Added to this are two combinations that would make the 4-point.

When you have your opponent reeling, don't give him the chance to recover. The winning backgammon player is the one who goes for the jugular when the time is ripe.

ROLF BRUCE FORSLAND will present concerts of his own romantic compositions Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 8-10, at the Hidden Valley Theater, Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley Village.

Rolf Forsland to play at Hidden Valley

Composer and pianist Rolf Bruce Forsland will present concerts of his romantic compositions Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 8-10, at the Hidden Valley Theater, Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley Village. Concerts begin at 8 p.m. each evening.

Described as a 19th-century salon artist and personality, Forsland composes and plays rhapsodies, nocturnes, ballads and pictorial numbers in the romantic styles of the 19th century. He presented his first classical concert in Carmel several years ago.

Jimmy Diamond to play for Hot Jazz Society

Dixieland bandleader Jimmy Diamond and his Nob Hill Gang, who play in the New Orleans Room of San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel, will perform at the October meeting and jam session of the Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society Sunday, Oct. 8, at Moose Hall, 555 Canyon Del Rey, Del Rey Oaks. The music begins at 2 p.m.

San Francisco Chronicle columnist Herb Caen rates the Diamond group as the best jazz band on the West Coast, and onetime "King of Swing" Benny Goodman rates the band's Vince Cattolica as the best jazz clarinetist playing today.

Diamond and his sidemen have played with the jazz groups of Red Nichols, Muggsy Spanier, Ralph Sutton and Lu Watters, as well as such swing groups as Woody Herman, Charlie Barnet, Joe Venuti, Bunny Berigan, Freddie Slack and Stan Kenton.

Admission is $1 for members of the non-profit educational society, $2 for non-members and 50 cents for children.

Memberships, available at the door, are $10 for individuals and $12.50 for families.

TREE FELLING ILLEGAL, COUNCIL RULES

The felling of trees on public streets in Carmel is illegal except out of extreme necessity, the City Council ruled Monday at its monthly meeting.

Council members said this is the beginning of a serious effort to make home builders conform to the growth of trees and protect city property. Carmel building permits will include a warning notice to this effect.

The council, in other actions, hired the city's first night policeman to work from 10:30 p.m. to 6 a.m. Charles Guth was hired because of a recent rash of burglaries affecting Carmel businesses and upsetting homeowners.

CARMEL CIRCUS LACKS CARMELITES

A Carmel circus sponsored by local Boy Scouts had all the elements of success: a parade, clowns, animals, but no audience.

One circus participant expressed disappointment with Carmel residents because of their lack of interest. "Where were all the balloons?" he asked. "It's a village affair and needs Carmel folks to make it a success."

The day's highlight occurred when the Boy Scouts changed their parade route to pass Dr. Henry Hollison, bedridden for two years, after he expressed his desire to see a circus.

GOLDEN BOUGH CLOSES

After an unsuccessful fund-raising effort for continued operation ot the Theatre of the Golden Bough, it was announced by owner Edward Kuster that a movie theater probably would replace it.

Plans for the house are still uncertain, he said, but $1,500 in donations were returned to contributors.

"I am considering various propositions," Kuster wrote in a letter to the Pine Cone. "An offer from Manzanita investors has been made but there's no commitment yet."

The Golden Bough was opened in 1924 as a little theater and a school for acting. It continued as a drama school until 1927 when it was leased out by Kuster. Until its closing Sept. 1, more than 50 plays were presented plus concerts, recitals and lectures.

PARKING PLAN SUBMITTED

Every new building in Carmel will be required to include off-street parking if an ordinance written by City Council members is endorsed by the planning commission.

At Wednesday night's planning commission meeting, recommendations were submitted that would require one stall for every three guest rooms in motels; one stall for every 100 square feet of space in eating and drinking establishments; and one stall per 600 square feet in professional buildings.

Parking stalls would be 200 square feet and adjacent to the building.

To prevent construction without off-street parking until the plan is adopted an interim ordinance was submitted that takes the power to issue building permits away from the building inspector and gives it to the council.

Calling it arbitrary, Commissioner John Chitwood said he would not endorse the interim ordinance. "You have no business rushing through something like that without the public's having an opportunity to find out what is afoot," he said.

Commission members agreed with his position and scheduled a special meeting later this month.

CARMEL'S DREAM HOUSE A REST ROOM

Carmel's dream house is back in the lap of the planning commission after the City Council insisted, at Wednesday night's meeting, a rest room plan for Carmel Beach be made.

Last month, the commission recommended the rest room project be abandoned saying the city should not build for tourists, it would be too expensive and create a police problem.

The council suggested that new plans, less elaborate and expensive than the first effort, be drawn up by the commission.

EXECUTIVE SESSIONS CALLED ILLEGAL

Councilman Francis Whitaker berated fellow councilmen at Monday's meeting for meeting in an executive session last week that barred the press and public.

Off-street parking was discussed which led to confused reports, Whitaker said. "Besides, they are illegal," he added.

Councilman Don Craig retorted, "When three council members get together on the telphone and get a swiftly all hatched-up to spring on the other two at the council meeting, that is worse than an executive meeting."

COUNCIL TAKES TREE TOUR

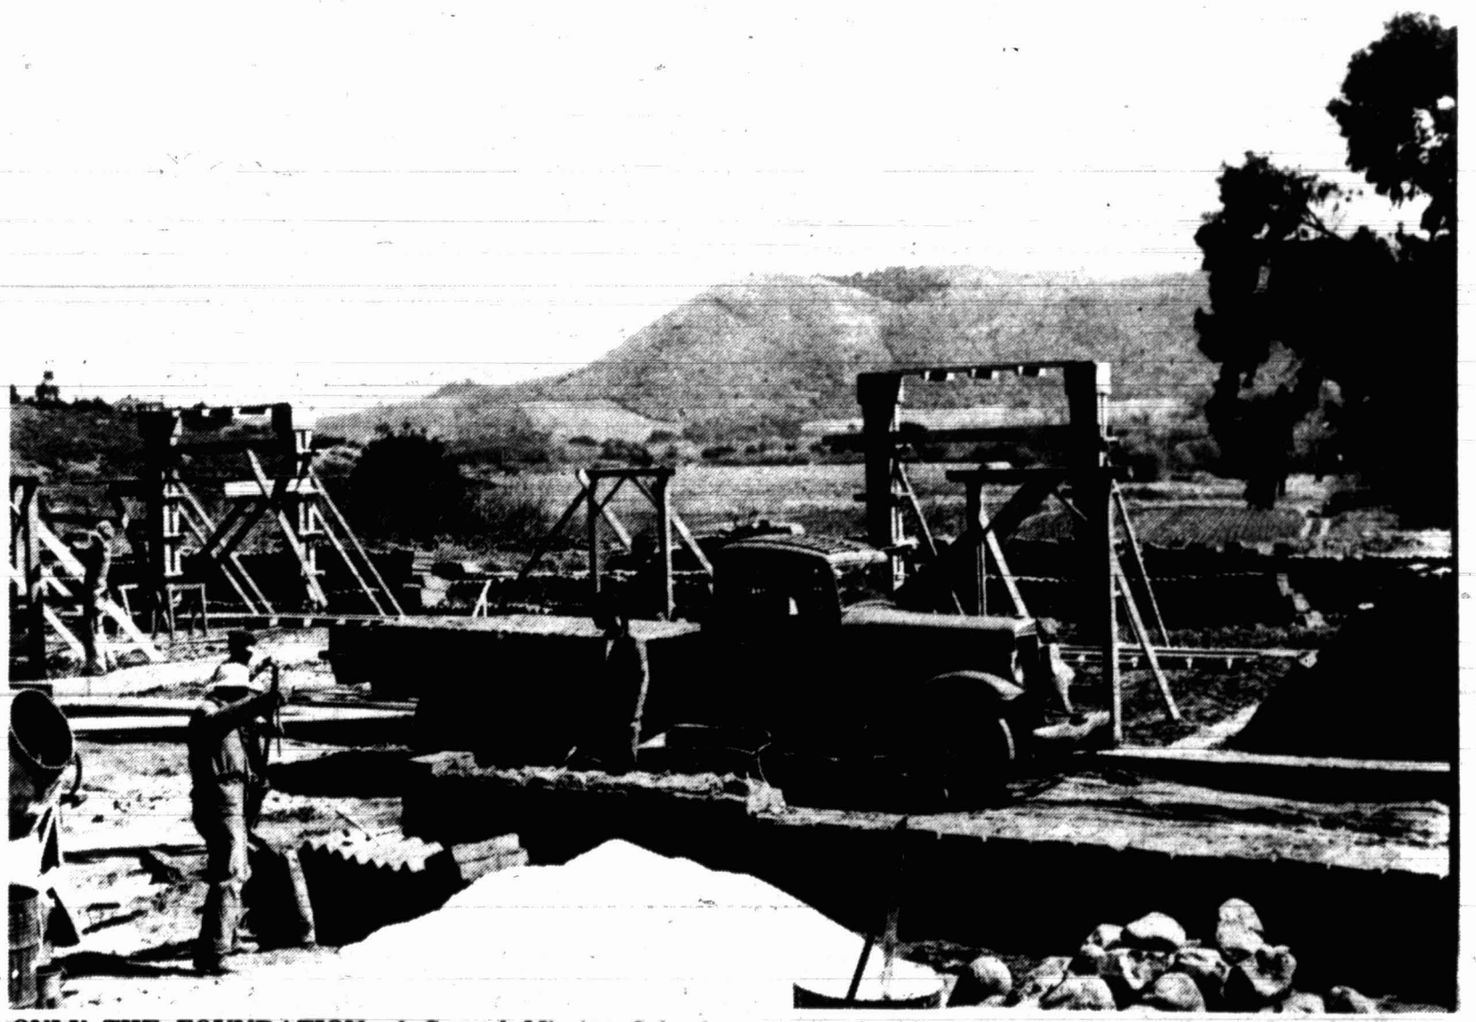
An application for a driveway variance usually means someone wants to widen the garage entrance.

Tuesday afternoon at the City Council's monthly tree tour, an unusual request was granted when applicant Howard Johnson asked that he be given a permit to narrow his driveway from 42 to 20 feet.

REPORT CARDS OCCUPY SCHOOL BOARD

Meaningful report cards for elementary students was the subject for debate at last night's school board meeting after Edwin McCurry, principal at River School, told the school board that present evaluations have little meaning for parents or students.

It was decided to revise the report cards and send them to parents previous to teacher conferences so necessary preparations by parents could be made.



ONLY THE FOUNDATION of Carmel Mission School existed before these workmen began restoration in 1945. Before refurbishment of Carmel Mission started 47 years ago, only the four walls of the church and the foundations of other buildings remained, according to Harry Downie, head of restoration since 1931. Our Churches

ALL SAINTS'

All Saints' Episcopal Church will host its annual Tennis Fun Day at the Mission Tennis Ranch on Saturday. Parish members, ranking from novice to advanced, will participate in the "round robin" competition, scheduled from 1 to 5 p.m.

A barbecue will be provided by the church youth groups after the tournament. Child care will be provided.

The event is designed to raise money for church youth groups. The public is invited. For more information, phone the church office at 624-3883.

Sunday at 10:15 a.m. a series of four weekly lectures will begin in the parish hall. The new lecture series concerns the proposed Book of Common Prayer. The first speaker is retired U.S. Army Col. Colgate Dorr.

The former rector at All Saints', the Rev. Alfred Seccombe, will preach at the 11 a.m. service.

PRESBYTERIAN

Sunday is Mission Sunday at the Carmel Presbyterian Church. The emphasis will be placed on missions and the work of missionaries. Speaking at all three services will be the Rev. Ray Nott, whose parish in Wyoming covers over 15,000 square miles. He makes his calls to parishioners by airplane. His parish includes eight churches. He is a graduate of the University of Tulsa and the Princeton Theological Seminary. He also was a state senator in Wyoming from 1974 to 1977.

Also at Sunday's services will be the distribution of "Love Loaves", small containers shaped like a loaf of bread. Parishioners will keep these banks until Thanksgiving, when all the money saved will be used to help fight world hunger.

WAYFARER

The Rev. Dr. Paul R. Woudenberg will deliver the sermon Sunday. The title of his sermon is "Accept No Substitutes."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The title of this Sunday's lesson-sermon is "Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?" The Sunday school, for young people up to age 20, meets at 11 a.m. Sunday services are at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

COMMUNITY

Sunday services are at 10:30 a.m. at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula. The Rev. Dr. Ronald Menmuir, the interim minister at Community, will deliver the sermon "The Mountain and the Squirrel."

MPC official to discuss state lobbyists

Vincent Bradley, Monterey Peninsula College director of continuing education, will present An Inside Look at the California Legislature Friday, Oct. 6, at the MPC Knowledge Update program. The lecture begins at 1:30 p.m. in MPC room E-3, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. Everyone is welcome to attend the free program.

Bradley was a legislative analyst in Sacramento when he worked in the office of the chancellor of the California Community College system from 1970 to 1974. He has also been a reporter at the Monterey Peninsula Herald.

He will present documents used in Sacramento and will discuss the legislative process with particular emphasis on "the third house," the lobbies that influence legislation.

For more information, phone 649-1150, ext. 451.

Swimmers unbeaten

by Jay Posner

Senior quarterback John Lucido threw for two touchdowns and scored one himself to lead the Carmel High Padres to a 30-0 rout over San Lorenzo Valley High on a hot Saturday afternoon in Felton.

"John is so unpredictable and so electrifying that sometimes it scares me," said Padre coach Frank Lynch of his star quarterback.

Carmel opens the Mission Trail Athletic League season Saturday by hosting North County High School at 2 p.m. Lynch said North County has no seniors on the squad and that they like to throw the ball. North County has yet to win a game, losing to Santa Cruz and Harvard High School of Los Angeles.

"We had three main goals we wanted to accomplish today," Lynch said of the San Lorenzo Valley game. "One of them was to solidify the defense, another was to score one touchdown per quarter and the third was to play as many people as possible." The Padres accomplished two out of those three, failing to score in the fourth quarter even though substitute running backs, Bob McKenzie and Bruce Lathrop looked good.

The Padre defense, led by Tom Larson, Mike Harney and Jim Colletto on the line, Tim Sherman, Paul St. Germain, and Dave Oliver at linebacker, and Cory Bliesner and Steve Selle at defensive back, held San Lorenzo to only 105 yards. When asked about the defense, Lynch said, "I'm generally pleased with the whole team effort; everybody did a super job."

IN GIRLS' TENNIS action, the Padres were defeated 5-2 by Santa Catalina on Tuesday of last week, but Carmel came back last Thursday to defeat RLS by the same score. The Padres overall record is now 2-3.

Against Santa Catalina, the doubles teams of Laura Tanous and Laurie McGlochlin and Dara Bernstein and Trisha Martin were the only ones who won matches.

In the match against RLS, singles winners were Aileen Kelly and Ingrid Brook-Kothlow. Kelly is now 4-1 on the season. Doubles winners were the teams of Heidi England and Ann McDonald, Laura Tanous and Laurie McGlochlin, Dara Bernstein and Tricia Martin. Tanous and McGlochlin have not lost this season.

THE CARMEL High varsity water polo team won its first two games of the season last week. The Padres defeated Santa Cruz, 18-5, and beat Gilroy, 21-2. Against Santa Cruz, Art Strum and Adam Sherburne led Carmel with four goals each. Mark Baldwin scored three times and Peter Kelly and Andy Fitton added two each. Carl Bresk, Jeff Hogans and Danny Falge scored one goal each.

Against Gilroy, Mark Baldwin led the Padres with six goals. Art Strum and Adam Sherburne each had five, while Andy Fitton, Jeff Hogans, Tom Agan, and Russ Brown contributed one goal each.

IN GIRLS' swimming, the Padres won two meets to stretch their consecutive win streak to 56 straight dual-meet victories. The Padres defeated Live Oak, 103-69, on Tuesday of last week, and Carmel defeated Harbor High, 126-46, last Thursday.

Against Live Oak, Cindy Frost and Kerry Neill each set two school records, and Kira Garrett set one. Neill and Frost also combined with Mary McCreery and Gail Frost to set a record in the 200 medley relay.

In the meet against Harbor, school records were set by Gail Frost in the 100 butterfly and Cindy Frost in the 100 breaststroke. Stacey Hicks, Kira Garrett and Kerry Neill each won two races.

Obituaries

Gladys L. Parsons

Gladys Locke Parsons, 91, died on Monday of last week at the Carmel Valley Manor hospital following a long illness. She had resided at the manor for 14 years.

She was born in Newark, N.J.

Mrs. Parsons and her late husband, Arthur Parsons, resided in Greece during the 1930s. The two worked together on the excavation of the ancient city of Olynthus in Macedonia.

She has one survivor, a sister-in-law, Harriet Parsons of San Francisco.

Phoebe K. Kennicott

Phoebe Katherine Kennicott, a 32-year resident of the Carmel area, died Sept. 24 at Driftwood Convalescent Hospital after a lengthy illness. She was 81.

Before she moved to the Driftwood Convalescent Hospital, Mrs. Kennicott had resided at Rippling River in Carmel Valley.

Her late husband, Reuel Kennicott, died in 1975.

Mrs. Kennicott is survived by sons Donald Harris of San Francisco and Bruce Harris and Sam Harris, both of Carmel, and 10 grandchildren.

Helen K. Haugstad

Helen Kay Haugstad, 40, died Sept. 23 at her home in Carmel, after an extended illness.

Miss Haugstad was the former owner of the Mad Hatter Restaurant in Carmel Valley.

She was born in Stanwood, Wash. She had been a resident of California for 15 years and a Carmel resident for eight.

She is survived by her brother, Jack Haugstad, of Las Vegas, Nev.; and by two sisters, Mary Stovall of Tacoma, Wash., and Betty Meyers of Everett, Wash.

Rex A. Anderson

Rex Augustus Anderson, 83, died Sept. 25 at Community Hospital. The retired U.S. government official had been a Carmel resident since 1967.

He was born in Alturas. A veteran of World War I, he also was a radio industry pioneer, working at several companies from 1918 to 1935.

His government career began in 1935 and spanned three decades. He worked in the Post Office and Treasury Department, the Lend Lease program Administration, the Economic Warfare Board and the Bureau of Foreign Commerce.

He was married to Carolyn Ruth Wilson in 1934 in Carmel.

Anderson is survived by his widow, who lives in Carmel; a son, Donald King Anderson of Kailua, Oahu, Hawaii; a daughter-in-law, Carol Anderson of Palo Alto, widow of Rex Anderson Jr., who died in January; six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

AND PROHIBITING, THE CONVERSION OF APARTMENTS IN THE COMMERCIAL DISTRICT OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA TO ANY OTHER USES

WHEREAS, apartments are encouraged in the commercial district of Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

WHEREAS, there is a shortage of apartments, and low-income housing in the City; and

WHEREAS, more and more apartment owners are converting such dwelling units to other uses; and

WHEREAS, the public health, safety and welfare require that converting apartments in the commercial district to other uses be studied by the Planning Commission for the purpose of drafting an Ordinance to control or prohibit the conversion of apartments to other uses.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1: The conversion of apartments to other uses in the commercial district of Carmel-by-the-Sea is hereby prohibited for a period of four months, pending drafting of an ordinance to control or prohibit the conversion of apartments to other uses in the commercial district.

Section 2: It is the intention of the Council that this Ordinance apply to all apartments presently being used for apartment purposes, whether or not any authorization or permit has been received from the City for conversion of those apartments to other uses.

Section 3: Effective Date: As an Urgency Ordinance, this Ordinance shall become effective immediately and shall terminate at midnight on February 1, 1979, unless extended as provided by law.

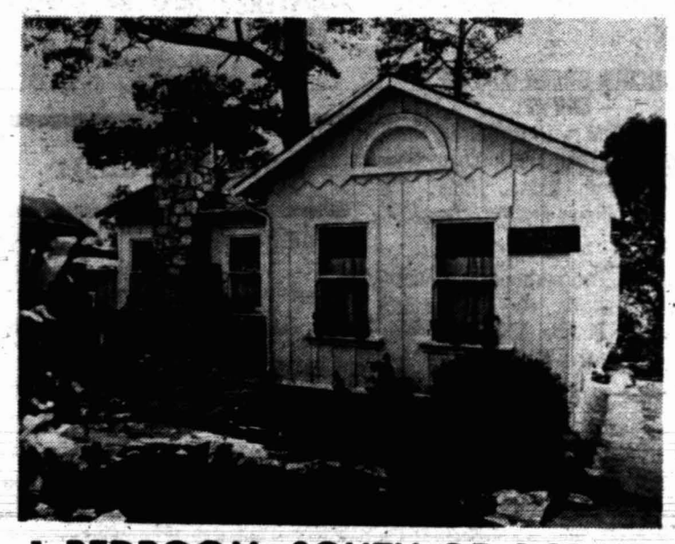
4 BEDROOMS, 4½ BATHS, DEN, $195,000

This is a very large, beautifully-built, absolutely custom home. There's a formal dining room, handsome entry hall with circular stairway, loads and loads of storage, garage for three cars, large grounds and much, much more. It's in Hatton Fields quite near Carmel High School, and it's priced well under replacement cost at $195,000.



1 BEDROOM, SOUTH OF OCEAN, NEAR TOWN AND BEACH

This is a charming little cottage on Lincoln near 10th, an easy, almost level walk to town. It even has a peek of the ocean and a separate dining room. It's a great home for a single or couple or a weekender for a family with sleeping bags. In this active market, it can't last long at $125,000.

2 BEDROOMS, DINING ROOM, CORNER LOT, $129,500

This home is walking distance to town. It's been updated and decorated in a most tasteful and attractive manner. The kitchen has all built-ins, there's central heat, wood siding, a real fireplace, and a sun-drenched (fog-drenched at the moment) patio. On a sunny morning, with only a little imagination, you can see the ocean from the master bedroom. This house is SO good it won't be around long.

2 BEDROOMS, 2 BATHS DINING ROOM, $128,500

This is a very neat, attractive home in Carmel Woods. Each bedroom is quite separate from the other and one has a separate outside entrance. The house is presently leased to an outstanding tenant, making it ideal for the purchaser who wants to occupy in the future, beat inflation by buying now and wants the house occupied by someone who will take excellent care of it and even improve it. Exclusive.
